Troop Pullout Shaky

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some key military leaders say it would be premature to withdraw as many as 100,000 U.S. troops from Vietnam this year, despite recent indications of reduced enemy battlefield activity.

While crediting the South Vietnamese army with steady progress, these high ranking officers say it is unlikely the ARVN could improve enough in the next six months to permit a U.S. pullout of that magnitude.

"It would be like taking a cake out of the oven before it is done," said one general.

The United States is about to start withdrawing some 25,000 Army, Marine and Navy men. President Nixon indicated recently he hopes the total could reach 100,000 by year's end. A decision on further U.S. troop reductions in Vietnam is due in early August and there have been indications it might involve an additional 25,000 men.

Improvement of South Vietnamese armed forces, a substantial reduction in enemy activity and agreement with Hanoi on mutual withdrawal are the three stated Nixon administration conditions for a significant U.S. troop pullback from Vietnam.

Military officers are refraining from reading any significance yet into the dropoff of enemy attacks reported Wednesday by Secretary of State William P. Rogers and confirmed by Pentagon statistics.

Some sources suggest Rogers may have been trying to signal Hanoi that, if the enemy keeps his battlefield operations at about the current low level, the United States will be able to go through with a second withdrawal beyond the 25,000 now definitely scheduled.

Military men say there has been a rhythm to enemy operations for the past four years—periods of lull interrupting spells of heightened enemy battlefield activity at intervals of several months.

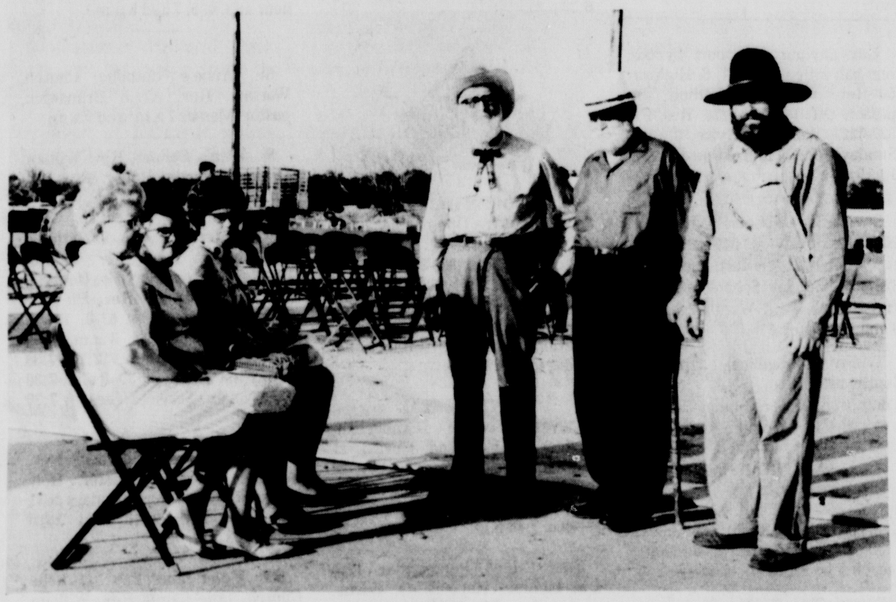

In the past, these military men say, the lulls have occurred when the enemy paused to replace battle losses of men and equipment, to regroup and rest.

"There are some indications that enemy actions during recent days have decreased," said Dan Z. Henkin, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs.

Celebration In Lincoln On 100th Anniversary

The City of Lincoln began celebrating its 100th year of existence Thursday by staging a 4-H and FFA Youth Livestock Show, a beard judging contest and the finals of the Miss Lincoln Pageant.

Miss Sara Sanders, the 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arley Sanders, Windsor, was chosen as Miss Lincoln before a crowd of several hundred persons Thursday evening.

She was sponsored throughout the preliminary judging and the finals by the Lively Ladies of Lincoln Club and has attended CMSC for one year. Miss Sanders was chosen Miss Lincoln High School two years ago and is a member of Harmony Baptist Church.

First runner-up was Miss JoLeta Ingram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Ingram, Lincoln, and second runner-up was Miss Elaine Eifert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Eifert, Lincoln.

The Rev. Roland Nothwehr, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church, acted as Master of Ceremonies, while Clarence Frisch, Chairman of the Centennial Committee, had the honors of crowning the queen.

Also participating in the festivities were Berry Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Davis, Lincoln, who carried the queen's crown; Rhonda Eifert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Eifert, Lincoln, who presented the queen's roses; and Tracy McCain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCain, also of Lincoln, who carried gifts for the three finalists.

Miss Sanders was escorted by J. R. Hunt, Miss Ingram by Dwayne Brandsgaard; and Miss Eifert by Tommy Bell, all of Lincoln.

The Lincoln High School Band, under the direction of Larry Floyd, provided the music for the evening.

Convertibles for the evening were furnished by the W. K. Garage in Cole Camp, Durham Motors in Warsaw, and Greer Motors in Sedalia.

Earlier in the evening, a beard judging contest was held in front of the park grandstands.

Henry Muller took first place in the competition, Ervin Bugh won second place, and John Eakin took third place for his beard. These three contestants received $25, $15, and $10 prizes respectively. Approximately 25 men were entered in the event.

The judging was done by Mary Jo Lumpe, Senaca, Kan.; Elizabeth Spry, Sedalia; and Alma Lee Hopkins, Windsor.

Astronaut In Moscow Full Day

MOSCOW (AP) — Sitting under a portrait of Karl Marx, U.S. astronaut Frank Borman leaned forward and told a Soviet woman official today: "You talk to your president and I'll talk to mine—and that will help the arms talks."

He was referring to forthcoming U.S.-Soviet arms limitations talks, during a chat here with matronly Mrs. Nina Popova, head of the Soviet Society for Friendship With Foreigners.

Spending the Fourth of July here on his first full day in Moscow, the personable U.S. goodwill ambassador skilfully used quips or diplomatic language to lighten the mood when Soviet officials tried to interject Cold War themes.

Mrs. Popova pointedly said that Borman's host, Soviet cosmonaut German Titov, was president of the "Soviet-Vietnamese Friendship Society."

There was a tense moment. But then Borman said: "Oh-oh—maybe we' ll be in trouble." Titov laughed. Borman asked: "which Vietnam—North or South?" The Soviet spacemen replied, also diplomatically: "We are with the people."

Borman said one purpose of his visit, the first to Russia by a U.S. astronaut, was to further such mutual understanding. He told the Soviet official Moscow and Washington should not "resort to the ultimate means of resolving questions—by destroying."

Gesturing toward his sons Frederick, 17, and Edwin, 15, sitting at the green felt table, Borman added: "They're all we really leave behind." When Mrs. Popova said she agreed, Borman made the comment about talking to each other's president.

Borman repeated a proposal he made in Leningrad Thursday for a joint U.S.-Soviet space flight. He said the proposed earth-orbiting lab would hold up to 100 men.

Seek Vietnam 'Cooling' Sign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is looking for some sign that the recent sharp drop in combat and the reported cutback in North Vietnamese infiltration into the South mean Hanoi is deliberately slowing down the war.

But officials are not sure they will get such an indication.

Secretary of State William P. Rogers suggests these developments may be due to some "change of plans" by the enemy command. And he has held open the possibility they could lead to increased U.S. troop withdrawal from Vietnam when President Nixon reviews his plans next month.

But Rogers also told a news conference Wednesday the decline in enemy activities could be due to manpower supply problems or to a regrouping of forces for new attacks.

Other officials say privately a new enemy offensive is a definite possibility based on the present, admittedly inadequate information.

Some authorities believe if the developments have political significance they would eventually get some signals to that effect, perhaps through Soviet or other diplomatic channels, from Hanoi.

One way for the United States to probe what is happening — apart from watching developments, is to ask North Vietnamese peace negotiators in Paris. Rogers said this would be done "when the right time comes . . . we do not attach too much significance to it at this time."

On the North Vietnamese infiltration level, Rogers said "We are not quite sure what it means except that we know pretty conclusively that there has been a reduction in the infiltration in the last two months."

At the Defense Department, however, military authorities tended to discount the significance of the reported drop. They said the total of North Vietnamese forces moving through the jungle trails normally varies from month to month.

Folklore Into Competition With History On Birthday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

From the highest point of land on the Atlantic coast to the shores of Hawaii, Americans take part in special ceremonies today to mark the 193rd birthday of the United States of America.

Folklore will compete with history, as outrigger canoe races in Hawaii, frog-jumping contests in Montana and Ohio and a sunrise square dance on Cadillac Mountain at Bar Harbor, Maine, highlight local festivities.

Flag-raising and speeches mark celebrations at two cradles of the American fight for independence — Philadelphia and Boston.

And there will be public fireworks displays from coast to coast as skies darken on the midsummer holiday.

At least one antiwar demonstration is planned, in Philadelphia. In Sparta, Wis., Army reservists will close the July 4th weekend with a flame-throwing, smoke-bomb, fake-ammunition assault on a "enemy bunker" in the local ballpark.

Most government and business offices will be closed. So will most department stores, food markets, banks, courts, libraries and stock markets. The Fourth of July is one of six holidays observed in all 50 states and in all U.S. possesions. The others are New Year's, Labor Day, Veterans Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

President Nixon, who is spending the weekend at his home on the shore of Biscayne Bay, Fla., will attend a parade at Key Biscayne.

When the Declaration of Independence was adopted in 1776, there were three million Americans. Today there are more than 200 million, many of whom have taken to the roads and skies for vacation trips.

The observances extend overseas. For the first time in Romania's history, a U.S. diplomat, Harry G. Barnes Jr., will make a nationally televised speech to Romanians commemorating Independence Day. Nixon is scheduled to visit the Communist nation Aug. 2-3.

Independence Hall in Philadelphia, where the declaration was adopted by the Continental Congress, has been decked out in red, white and blue bunting.

Astronaut Walter Cunningham, who flew in the Apollo 7 flight, called on student protesters and antiwar demonstrators to remember the honor and courage of the signers of the declaration.

"Our country is only as strong as its individual citizens," he said in a prepared speech, at Independence Hall, "and, misguided or not, minority or not, the demonstrators of today are the ingredients with which we forge our nation of tomorrow."

In the lobby, the Liberty Bell, marred by a large crack, will be tapped gently.

In Boston, a parade will stop at Old Granary Burial Ground, where three signers of the Declaration of Independence—John Hancock, Samuel Adams and Robert Treat Paine—are buried. Then a high school student will read the document from the balcony of the Old State House, where it was first read to Bostonians 193 years ago.

In Milwaukee, hand-carved, antique circus wagons will parade through the business district. In Seward, Alaska, more than 60 persons will take part in the 55th annual Mt. Marathon Race, up and down the 3,922-foot peak.

Outrigger canoe races will be held off Waikiki in the nation's newest state, while dancing that started at midnight continues at Bar Harbor, Maine, atop the Atlantic coast's highest peak, 1,532-foot Cadillac Mountain.

Fireworks will be held in the Pasadena Rose Bowl, Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum and Anaheim stadium in California, in Decatur, Ala., and in Cleveland's Edgewater Park on Lake Erie, at the 30th annual Festival of Freedom.

The yearly celebration at the Washington Monument, with massing of the colors at 7:30 p.m., will be followed by fireworks.

Scrap Rigid Timetables For School Integration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has scrapped rigid timetables for achieving public school desegregation in the South, triggering cries of outrage from congressional liberals and civil rights leaders.

The action also left some southerners confused as to just how much of a departure the new procedures will make from previous policies.

Hammered out as a compromise after weeks of intra-governmental wrangling, the administration statement abolished the September deadline for southern districts to complete school desegregation.

Instead, school districts will be allowed additional time—no set amount was given—if they can prove a delay is needed for "bonafide educational and administrative" reasons.

The announcement dropping the "arbitrary deadlines" was made jointly by Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch.

They said the policy statement was needed because of a "great deal of confusion" surrounding the guidelines laid down last year by the administration of former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

But Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., said it was "deliberately issued at a time when many members of Congress are out of Washington."

Angry reaction also came from Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, D-Md., who said any step backward in school desegregation would be a tragedy. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said it might prove disastrous. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Nixon had "failed his first important test in the protection of equal rights for all of our citizens," adding, "I fear that, once again, . . . he is paying off a political debt."

Raising a similar protest was Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., who said, "I have never made the charge that President Nixon made a deal with the South to win the (Republican) nomination, but events are beginning to speak for themselves."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who has led a drive to relax the desegregation standards, termed the new policy an improvement but said it did not go far enough "toward a true freedom of choice."

Any further judgment, Thurmond said, would be reserved "until I see how this new policy is administered."

Roy Wilkins, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, reacted strongly by accusing the administration of "breaking the law."

Immediately affected will be 263 districts which were facing the possibility of a cutoff of federal funds this September if they do not comply with federal standards.

Leon Panetta, head of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, estimated that "only a very few"—possibly under 20—of those districts could qualify for additional time.

But his predecessor in the Johnson administration, Ruby G. Martin, disagreed, predicting that many districts that were planning to desegregate will now hold out for more time.

"The practical reality," Mrs. Martin said, "is that they've opened the floodgates."

In dropping the timetables, Mitchell and Finch said a policy "requiring all school districts, regardless of the difficulties they face, to complete desegregation by the same terminal date is too rigid to be either workable or equitable."

In considering requests for additional time, Mitchell and Finch said, "we will take into account only bonafide educational and administrative problems" such as "serious shortages of necessary physical facilities, financial resources or faculty."

And "where additional time is allowed, it will be the minimum shown to be necessary," they said.

The two cabinet officials praised desegregation—mostly in 17 southern and border states—that once maintained racial segregation as official policy.

Of those districts, they said, 2,994 have "voluntarily and completely" desegregated, 333 are completing the process, 234 plan to do so this fall, and 369 are under court orders to desegregate.

Tell Israel To Cancel Annexation

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The U.N. Security Council told Israel Thursday night for a second time to cancel its annexation of the Arab sector of Jerusalem. The vote was unanimous.

But Israel said Jerusalem would continue as it had since the 1967 war when Israeli troops took over the Jordanian sector and the government declared the city reunited.

The council adopted an Asian-African resolution that "urgently calls once more upon Israel to rescind forthwith all measures taken by it which may tend to change the status of the City of Jerusalem."

The resolution is similar to one the council passed May 21, 1968 but it "censures in the strongest terms all measures taken to change the status of Jerusalem. It warns that the council will reconvene to consider further action if Israel does not comply.

The United States abstained from the May 1968 resolution, but voted for the one Thursday night. Observers said it marked a shift in attitude by the United States to a less pro-Israeli stand on the status of Jerusalem.

After the vote Jordanian Ambassador Muhammad H. El-Farra, who had asked for the council debate that began Monday, said, "Today Israel, more than ever before, stands alone."

New Officer Is Medically A 'Liberal'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dr. Roger O. Egeberg, nominated by President Nixon as the nation's chief health officer, says he is a medical liberal who will promote new approaches to public health.

"I'm medically a liberal . . . and I believe I can get the job done," Egeberg told a news conference Thursday.

He said he would urge new programs including neighborhood health centers, visiting nurse programs and new methods for treating the poor.

"You can't prescribe medicine to be taken with or after meals for people who don't have regular meals," he said.

Egeberg, 65, second choice for the post after Dr. John H. Knowles, director of Massachusetts General Hospital, said, "I'm damned proud to have been asked."

He said he is not as outspoken as Knowles, who lost the nomination because of his public stance on medical issues.

"Rather than state aims categorically," said Egeberg, "I'd prefer to emphasize those things people agree on."

Egeberg stressed that he is not the American Medical Association's "pigeon" but said he feels the AMA has been unfairly maligned. "There are tremendous numbers of doctors in the AMA who want the same things I want."

Fishbait Meets Responsibility

WASHINGTON (AP) Brushing dandruff off the Speaker's shoulders isn't listed as one of the 114 duties of the official Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives, but that doesn't faze Fishbait Miller.

"All the members of the House are my responsibility and if John W. (Speaker John W. McCormack) has dandruff, I've got to get it off," proclaims Miller, whose real name is William M. but who has been called Fishbait since he was a 75-pound shrimp back in Pascagoula, Miss.

"I brush off Majority Leader Albert (Carl Albert) too. Once I told a congresswoman her hose didn't match. If the ladies in the House get careless with how they sit, I remind them there are wolves in the gallery."

Miller, now a pudgy, bespectacled 190-pounder, has become something of an institution around Capitol Hill as the $40,000-a-year guardian of the modes and mores of the men who make the country's laws.

He has been on intimate terms with every president since, and including, Franklin D. Roosevelt. He has had two personal letters this year from President Nixon, both starting, "Dear Fisbait." Letters addressed simply "Fishbait" find their way to Miller's spacious suite in the Capitol.

Miller, now 59, was brought to Washington 37 years ago by Mississippi Rep. Wlliam Colmer. He worked in the mail room as a sorter, later assistant sergeant at arms, minority doorkeeper and finally doorkeeper, a post he has held for the last 20 years. He has a law degree.

The office was instituted by Congress March 5, 1789 and from the beginning has been something of a misnomer. The doorkeeper does much more than watch the doors.

Miller has 340 permanent employees under him, more than any other officer of the House. They include doormen, messengers, pages and barbers. He oversees 13 rest rooms, five barber shops, two snack bars, two cloak rooms and 28 telephones. He supervises the folding room which sends out more than 350 million pieces of mail from the 435 congressmen.

Besides brushing away dandruff, the doorkeeper lights congressmen's cigars, helps them on with their coats and tells each, "Good speech."

He introduces visiting dignitaries and at joint sessions of Congress stands at the rear door and cries: "Mister speaker, the President of the United States."

"President Truman was the most natural and most informal of the presidents," Fishbait said. "He liked to come over and bend his elbow with Bourbon and Branch water with Speaker Rayburn.

"Most of the presidents I knew in the House or Senate before they became president. All but Eisenhower. I had to get acquainted with Ike. But he was like the rest—as natural as an old shoe."

Lift On Arms Ban May Open Conferences

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The U.S. decision to lift its ban on arms sales to Peru and Ecuador may open the way for a conference on offshore fishing rights, Foreign Minister Edgardo Mercado of Peru said Thursday night.

The United States has been pressing for the conference with Peru, Ecuador and Chile for more than a year, but its diplomatic efforts have been thwarted by continuing seizures of U.S. tuna boats off South America's Pacific coast.

When the suspension of the arms sales ban was announced Thursday, it was understood a four-nation conference already had been arranged. But Mercado indicated his government had not yet committed itself.

Peruvian sources said they expected the four-nation talks to start soon, possibly this month or next, in Lima or Buenos Aires. An American source suggested they would take place in a "neutral" country, perhaps Colombia.

In the 1952 Declaration of Santiago, the three South American Pacific nations declared their territorial boundaries extended 200 miles beyond the coast and that they had jurisdiction over all fishing in those waters.

Like most maritime nations, the United States recognizes only a 12 mile limit, and U.S. boats frequently enter the rich fishing territory between 12 and 200 miles off the coast.

The dispute has led to a steady deterioration in relations besween the United States and the governments of Ecuador and Peru.

Thomas D. Hepting

Thomas David Hepting, son of Pastor Wilhelm and Mrs. Hilda Hepting, Emma, was ordained in a special ordination service Sunday, June 22, at Holy Cross Lutheran Church, Emma.

Pastor Hepting conducted the service in contemporary English, while members of the congregation chanted "Te Deum Laudamus." Members of the Hepting family, members and guests received the Lord's Supper.

Hepting was born in St. Louis March 21, 1942. He graduated from Holy Cross Lutheran School in Emma. He received a B.A. degree from Concordia Senior College, Fort Wayne, Ind., and a B.D. degree from Concordia Seminary in St. Louis. He vicared at Libby, Mont., from Aug. 15, 1967 through August, 1968.

Hepting will be installed as pastor of a dual parish at Harbine and Jansen, Neb., on Aug. 3. His father has been invited to preach the installation sermon.

This was the second ordination service to ever be held at Holy Cross Church. The first was in 1871 when Henry F. Bartens was ordained by Pastor F. J. Blitz, Concordia.

The group was under the direction of Roger Glidewell, director of music and youth at New Hope Baptist. Rev. Gary Taylor of LaMonte Baptist led the Bible study.

Quiet Pride In History Of Nation

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — All Americans should take quiet pride in the history of this nation, its present position of world leadership, and the boundless hopes it has for the future, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said today.

In remarks prepared for a traditional July Fourth observance at the Truman Library, Symington said "It is not difficult, in these days of rapid change at home as well as abroad, to at times question the road ahead."

"Nearly always, when the times become difficult, our country has been blessed with great leaders; and with that premise, it is my privilege to pay tribute to the American all of us respect the most, and to whom we are the most devoted — Harry S. Truman."

"The decision President Truman made changed the course of history. It was his courage and determination which checked the advance of totalitarian aggression during the dangerous Stalin years of the cold war. And it was his wise and compassionate interest which laid the groundwork for legislation designed to grant a productive life of dignity to all Americans."

"Mr. Truman once said, 'I have boundless faith in the common sense and ultimate fairness of the American people.' Let us say amen to that wise statement. Let us rededicate our nation to the kind of constructive forward looking action which was always so characteristic of his own service to his country."

TRAVEL TOGS for actress Florinda Bolkan are slick leather trousers, topped with a fringed suede jacket. The Brazilian star was seen at Rome's airport.

Cinnamon From Saigon Is a War 'Casualty'

By GAYNOR MADDOX

In these times of affluence and disruption, variety is still the spice of life. But the spice industry, itself, is going through a series of varieties, too.

For example, cinnamon from around Saigon was once the dream of the spice epicure. Disruption of war allows only a few grains to reach our tables nowadays.

Most of our cinnamon is imported from Indonesia — excellent but not superexcellent as was that from South Vietnam. Ceylon, also, grows a buff-colored type of cinnamon, not as strong in flavor, which is popular with Mexicans. They mix it with their chocolate.

"Peppercorns, the bellwether of our spice industry, are in ever-increasing demand. Last year we imported 51 million pounds, about 14 million pounds more than we imported three years ago," reports Stewart P. Wands, executive vice president of the American Spice Trade Association.

"But not all of it comes from India whose Malabar and Tellichery peppers are rated the finest in the world by many gourmets. Most of India's pepper today goes to the Soviet Union and British Commonwealth countries under barter arrangement. We draw on what's left," he says.

Indonesia is an important source of pepper. So also is Brazil.

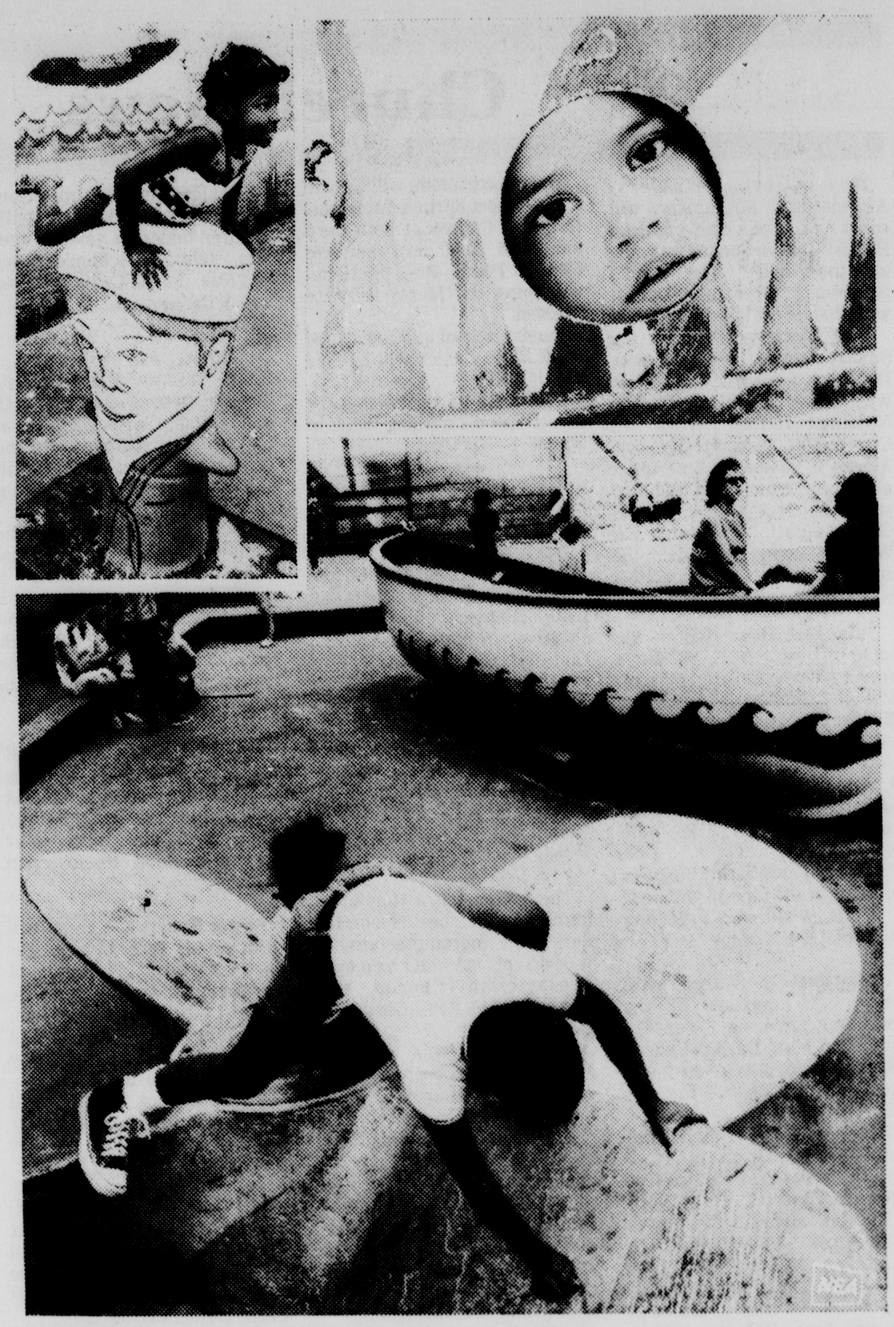

"Some years ago Japanese emigres to Brazil started planting pepper in that country. They developed the industry and it plays a large part in the world pepper market," Wands explains.

The marked increase in use of spices in the United States is due to rising income, to the effects of travel and a change in the attitude toward the "harmful" effects of spices.

"Five years ago many people had the false idea that spices were harmful, particularly to children. In fact, one national magazine devoted to children refused to accept an advertisement for deviled ham because it contained spice. All that has been changed. The more or less traditional American menu of plain meat and potatoes has undergone great change. Spices have entered the American kitchen for keeps," observes Wands, formerly head of the USDA Foreign Agriculture Service's Sugar and Tropical Products section.

"The growth of domestic production of spices is interesting, too. On the West Coast we now grow significant amounts of basil, dill, marjoram and tarragon. In California, Arizona and Texas we grow large amounts of chili. More and more paprika is being raised in California," Wands says.

For an epicurean dessert, heat maple syrup with a little butter; stir in some cognac. Serve over rolled very thin French-type pancakes. This dessert makes a great ending for a soup-and-salad lunch or supper. The pancakes may be made ahead and heated in a little orange juice in a big skillet.

IT DOESN'T TAKE MONEY, just imagination, to turn empty city lots into playgrounds. This playlot in New York's West 87th Street is one of 14 set up in the last year and paid for through private donations. An old ferryboat propeller makes a great scrambling place while mothers rest in an obsolete lifeboat. A youngster climbs on a bollard that once held a ship's mooring lines while another peers out of a "space rocket," actually an old iron lung, one of the pieces of salvage material contributed. Unlike most playgrounds which cost New York an average of $40,000 to set up, this one cost the city nothing.

Wilderness of Canada Threatened by Pollution

OTTAWA (AP) — To many Americans fleeing polluted air and rivers, Canada is the last unspoiled wilderness. This country still has millions of acres scented by evergreens and cut by clear-flowing streams, but the damage of pollution is setting in here, too.

One-quarter of the world's known fresh-water volume, 117,000 miles of ocean shoreline and one of the world's largest concentrations of game, birds and fish are threatened. Not to mention man, the spoiler.

"We have no illusions about trying to restore Canada to its unpolluted purity of before. All we can do is determine how much it can take and try to control it," said E. Roy Tinney, one of the nation's water guardians.

Tinney is acting director of policy and planning in the water branch of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources. His job: trying to coordinate federal efforts with those of the 10 provincial governments to meet the water needs of mining and industry and at the same time protect natural resources.

The situation is nowhere near as grave as in the United States. But already pollution costs Canada more than all its floods, fires, accidents and other disasters every year. The pollution centers within 100 miles of the U.S.-Canadian border are beginning to form a "pollution belt."

Filthy lakes and rivers menace health. Fish die in streams and bays. Scum and algae drive Canadians from their beaches. Tourist resorts and other businesses fail, property values fall and taxes rise with the spiraling costs of water treatment.

"You can do three things with waste — wash it, burn or bury it," said Tinney. "All three can cause pollution, but in Canada we have the advantage of being able to learn from other people's mistakes. We can choose one method that will do the least harm in one region, and switch to another elsewhere."

In its 1968 planning report the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources noted: "No other water pollution problem in Canada and in the industrial heartland of North America can compare with the continued deterioration of the Great Lakes."

Canada's water men are very careful about calling it a joint Canadian-U.S. problem, created by both sides of the border. But obviously the industrial-residential mass on the American side contributes more pollution than the less developed Canadian side.

It could get worse before solutions are found. Canadian forecasts on population growth in the Great Lakes drainage basin indicate an increase from the present 30 million to 35 million to 80 million by the end of the century.

"We still don't know the answers," said Tinney.

While scientists try to find the answers — completion of a $20 million Center for Inland Waters at Burlington, Ont., was a big shot in the arm for research — the federal and provincial governments are exerting controls that they hope will go one better than Europe and the United States.

Germany and France use the fee system. Municipalities and industries pay to release pollutants in European waters. Payers and payees seem happy with the arrangement, but Tinney points out: "Just look at the Seine, the Rhine and the Danube -- all polluted."

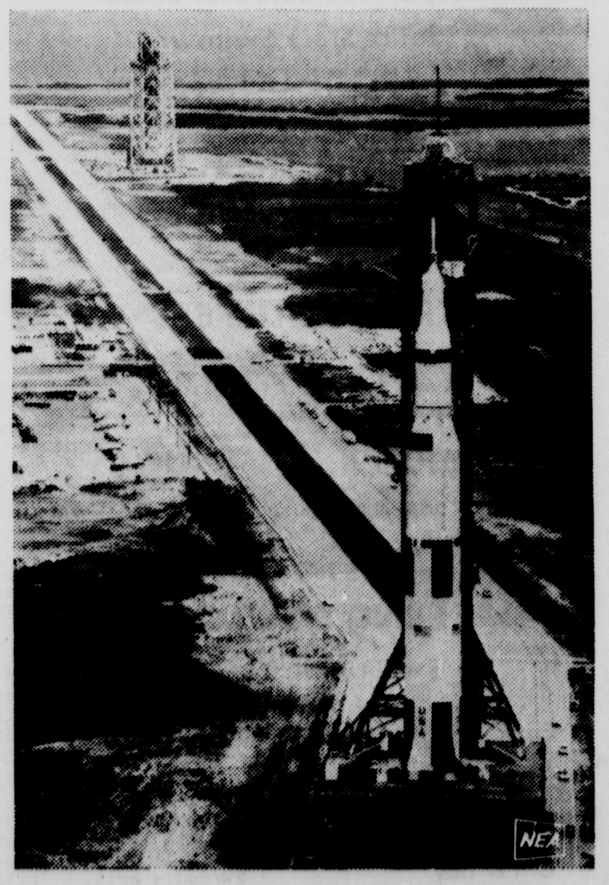

The United States relies mainly on punitive legislation. "I don't want to criticize," says Tinney, "It might be all right for the Americans, but not for us."

The Water Resources Planning Act of 1965 added to Canada's punitive legislation what Tinney calls the "socioeconomic institutional approach." Basically it's a government effort to educate industry and the public about the detriments of pollution — not only the obvious loss of resources and the health danger but also the hidden costs.

An example: If Canadians are going to demand 10 colors of toilet paper, they should know more dye effluents will be dumped into their water, they may have to pay more for the toilet paper and shell out more taxes for purifying that polluted water. Suddenly basic white looks great in the bathroom.

A new Water Act is being presented in Parliament. It is expected to strengthen already strict controls and expend on the socioeconomic approach.

Industrial and domestic waste creates most of Canada's pollution, but mines and oil wells bear watching.

CRAWLING at a speed of a mile an hour, the Apollo 11 space vehicle rolls toward its launch site. The launching, set for July 16, will carry the first Americans to a landing on the moon.

ISOLATION SUIT is under development at the Houston space center. The finished garment may be used after a first-order contingency landing to isolate returning Apollo lunar astronauts between water egress and arrival at a mobile quarantine unit on board the recovery ship.

James K. Couhig, Miss Joan Baker and Arthur D. Stumpf have joined the State Fair Community College faculty for the 1969-1970 academic year, according to Fred Davis, president of the college.

Couhig will be an instructor in speech and drama. He is a 1959 graduate of Sacred Heart High School and received his B.A. degree from St. Joseph's College, Rensselaer, Ind., in 1963, and his M.A. degree in 1969 from the University of Missouri at Kansas City. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Couhig, 900 South Quincy.

Couhig has taught at UMKC and Rockhurst College, Kansas City, and traveled as a publisher's representative for Prentice-Hall Publishing Co. He served a term as president of the Columbian Players Drama Society, a member of the St. Joseph's Debate Team and recently participated in theatre productions at the Jewish Community Center, the UMKC Playhouse, Coach House Players, and the Barn Community Theatre.

Miss Baker, a native New Yorker, is a 1965 graduate of Falconer Central High School, Falconer, N.Y., and received her A.B. degree from the University of Missouri at Kansas City in June, 1969.

She served as the choreographer for the Fentier Village Show in New York for two consecutive years, and for the Miss Missouri State Pageant. Her most recent effort involved choreography in Smith-Cotton High School's spring performance of South Pacific.

Miss Baker will work in the area of modern dance and theatre, and with Mrs. Dixie Byrum, womens' physical education instructor, will help change the current cheerleading squad into a Pom-Pon Group.

Stumpf has attended numerous military service schools in electronics, ranging from basic electricity through solid state circuitry and microwave. His position at the college will be instructor of electronics technology.

He is a graduate of St. Francis Preparatory School, Spring Grove, Pa. and received his B.A. from the University of the Philippines while serving there with the U.S. Air Force. He did graduate work in education and psychology at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Stumpf and his wife, Judith Lee, live at 2903 West 11th.

The Electronics Technology program will be initiated at the college Sept. 15, and will lead to a two-year associate of science degree, Davis said.

Students Make Honors List

Sedalia students who made the honor list for the spring semester at the University of Missouri at Rolla are Harold R. Fitzgerald, Route 2; Tom Allen McFadden, 916 West Sixth; Kathy Ann Rages, Route 2; and Ronald Schuster, 807 East Seventh.

Other area students on the list are Larry Wayne McDowell, Holden; Michael Ray Judd, Knob Noster; Roger Allen Hayes, Warrensburg; and Michael R. Apprill, Higginsville.

Students must have made a grade point average of 2.75 and above to make the list. The best rating is 4.00.

Unpleasant Odor To Insure Safety

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Cascade Natural Gas Corp. is sending unpleasant odors to its 62,000 customers to introduce a safety measure.

Along with the month's bills is a folder picturing a flame. Scratching the flame releases the smell, which is an odor the company says it has released into the gas lines.

In case of gas leaks, customers will recognize the smell and be alerted to danger, Cascade explained, noting that natural gas itself is odorless.

Young Eisenhowers Are 'Good People'

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — Police chief James J. Whalen describes David and Julie Eisenhower as "one of the nicest, politest couples you would ever want to meet."

Helping the eight-man Secret Service detail provide security for the President's daughter and her husband gave Whalen an opportunity to converse frequently with the publicity-shy newlyweds.

"They are really a solid couple," he said in an interview, "with their feet solidly and sanely planted on the ground. They know where they are going."

London Is Abortion Capital of World

LONDON (AP) — The Daily Express said today London has become the abortion capital of the world. Abortions have been legal in Britain for a year.

The newspaper sent reporter Jane Carter to find out how long it would take a foreign girl knowing no one in Britain to get in touch with an abortion clinic. It took her exactly 53 minutes, and the clinic quoted her a price of $356 for the operation.

Ann Landers

Should Write, Not Phone Her Poodle

Dear Ann Landers: If anyone doubts that there are an awful lot of nutty people in this world, they ought to read your column for one week.

The letter from that woman who telephoned her poodle long distance every night so he could hear her voice was the dumbest thing I ever heard of. She should have written him a letter. It would've been cheaper than a phone call and the dog would have gotten a lot more out of it.

Dogs recognize people by their scent. If the woman had run the stationery over her face a few times and handled the envelope, the poodle would have gotten the message. — Dog Lover Also

Dear Also: I asked a poodle expert for his opinion and he said either way, it was no big deal for the dog. The master, not the hound, gets the pleasure out of the telephone calls.

Dear Ann Landers: Six months a go a friend of ours was placed in an impossible position and had to divorce her husband. Unfortunately, she missed her plane, returned home unexpectedly, and caught her husband with his secretary.

We all felt sorry for Bernice and have tried to include her as before. But she is becoming so pushy that our sympathy is turning to resentment. Bernice has cried on every male shoulder in our crowd. Last night she telephoned me at 6:00 p.m. and asked if she could share whatever we had for dinner. I said, "Of course." After we ate, my husband announced that he had a load of paperwork to do. Bernice looked stricken and said she needed to talk to him "privately." I went upstairs and left them in the den. They talked until 2:00 a.m.

This morning my husband was bleary-eyed and cross. At the breakfast table, in the presence of the children, he said, "Your friend Bernice is driving me loony and I don't want to get trapped by her again."

Shall I tell her bluntly that my husband has had it? — Up To Here

Dear Up: Apparently your husband has vocal cords because he told you that Bernice is driving him loony. Suggest that he use those vocal cords to tell her himself. In the meantime, you can help by not allowing her to maneuver you. If she calls in the future to invite herself to dinner, tell her, "So sorry — we have family plans."

Dear Ann Landers: I know you don't run a garden column, but so many people read Ann Landers that I'm sure someone who sees this can help me.

When I was a child in Washington, my mother raised some delightful sweet smelling flowers which she called jasmine tobacco. I adored the scent and would dearly love to know by what name those flowers are called out East. I've described them to two local florists and to several friends. No one here can help me. I'll bet if you print my letter, a reader will know the answer. — Nostalgic Nancy

Dear Nancy: I'll print the information if someone will supply it. How about it out there?

Jehovah's Witnesses Convention To Attract Thousands

John M. Yasko, Convention Manager for the International Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses scheduled for July 18-25 at Kansas City's Municipal Stadium, says he will now have to revise the original attendance estimate. Convention officials had been estimating 36,000 would attend the eight-day gathering, but Yasko now says it is likely 40,000 or more will be coming.

"Requests for accommodations are still coming in from deleates at the rate of 400 to 500 daily," Yasko explained. "Information received from other International "Peace on Earth" Assemblies to be held in July indicate that attendance figures at all of them will exceed expectations. More than 8,000 room requests were rejected in Atlanta due to the lack of commercial facilities, and convention officials there are recommending those delegates seek accommodations in Kansas City, Chicago or New York," he said. Yasko added that at the scheduled Vancouver, Canada assembly, officials have decided to have their meeting at the huge Coliseum rather than the Stadium originally planned because now they expect thousands more.

Yasko stated, "We listed thousands of accommodations in area hotels and motels and these are rapidly being filled, so now the delegates will require accommodations in thousands of private homes. Our work is 'cut out for us,' on the Fourth of July weekend and our appeal for rooms to rent is urgent! All local Jehovah's Witnesses, whether businessmen, housewives or youths, who are qualified to hunt for and register room accommodations for the convention will be spending the entire Fourth of July weekend going door to door seeking room accommodations for the delegates. We must provide additional accommodations for many of the overflow delegates from other convention locations planning to attend our assembly here in Kansas City.

"While Jehovah's Witnesses spend their time primarily preaching and teaching the Bible from door to door in their neighborhoods, all twenty congregations of the Witnesses in the entire Greater Kansas City area will be spending weekdays and weekends in the special activity of hunting for rooms to rent until sufficient rooms in private homes are found. Fourteen congregations from other nearby cities, including Topeka, Lawrence and St. Joseph, have been assisting in the search for rooms in Kansas City.

"There are over 2,000 volunteer workers assigned to the task of calling on homes in the area, while an additional group of 20 clerks and typists are engaged in assigning motel, hotel and private home accommodations as they are obtained.

"Altogether over 80 volunteer workers are manning the 20 different convention departments needed for the task of making this religious assembly a success. The convention headquarters are at 1000 County Line Road in Kansas City, Kansas.

"Of great interest to all convention delegates and Kansas Citians will be the Bible talks interspersed with personal experiences and Bible dramas. Live, costumed, Bible dramas, as well as symposiums and discussions, will make the eight-day assembly a time of education, instruction and enlightenment for all who attend. This is a personal invitation for all interested people who desire to attend the religious gathering to feel welcome," concluded Convention Manager Yasko.

Convention highlight will be the feature Bible lecture, "The Approaching Peace of a Thousand Years" by N. H. Knorr, President of the Watchtower Society from New York.

Single-Fisted Effort for 'Good News'

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Like almost everybody else, Lady Malcolm Douglas-Hamilton has grown weary of picking up her newspaper, watching her television, listening to her radio — and being bombarded with "bad news."

Unlike almost everybody else, Lady Douglas-Hamilton is trying to do something about it. She is trying to resurrect "good news."

Her ambition, in this age of rape, riot, rage and revolution seems a decidedly formidable one. But Lady Douglas-Hamilton, a Boston-born widow of a Scottish nobleman, thinks there is a preponderance of excellence in the country, always has been, and once it's rediscovered and promulgated, good news will rise again.

Lady Douglas-Hamilton directs an organization called "The Center of American Living," which, among other things, periodically polls and attempts to understand the prevailing national sentiment on various social issues.

As a result of these polls, Lady Douglas-Hamilton says, she has become "convinced that most people are tired of the constant news reports of negativism. They are tired of reading, seeing and hearing, almost exclusively, about crime, vice, war, destruction and irrationality."

Most people, she reasons, simply have a nostalgia for good.

"But we don't seem to see the good any more," she adds. "It always seems as if the achievements of our nation — the reasonable thoughts, the challenges met, the goals reached — are always buried in the back pages."

The solution to this, as Lady Douglas-Hamilton sees it, is not to toss out the bad news. She says she has worked in the communications field herself and has an aversion to censorship. Rather, she feels: "We must find ways to give 'equal time' to the good news that is happening."

Lady Douglas-Hamilton has in mind the location, assemblage and distribution of this kind of information by both electronic and mechanical journalism.

Her idea is to match bad stories with good, violence with virtue, war with wit — thereby enabling people to get fuller perspectives on events.

She hopes, and expects, that her Center for American Living will thus become the Center for Good News. She says the Center has 168 affiliated clubs throughout the nation (service groups, sewing circles, large and small) which can be used as grass roots news gathering sources.

Even now, Lady Douglas-Hamilton says, the affiliated clubs, at her request, are sending in "heart-warming and very important news stories."

Some examples:

—Berea College in Kentucky has gone through another school year without student disorder. All students at Berea are kept busy earning educations. The school provides jobs in lieu of tuition. Whenever students aren't studying, they're working (as janitors, clerks, gardeners). As one sophomore puts it: "We're too pooped to protest anything."

—A married couple near Detroit have put "good music and good fun" back into area nightlife. Tired of "sadistic television, smutty movies, discotheques and go-go dives," the couple set up old-fashioned recreation in a local barn. Banjo music is played, square dances are held, soft drinks are served — and the place is packed every evening.

—A newborn baby in Spokane, Wash., not long ago, was discovered to be allergic to all food except human milk. Its mother, however, was incapable of providing nearly enough. Attending physicians, fearing for the infant's life, sent out a national plea. Within hours, women from across the nation sent in their unique, life-saving donations.

These illustrations, says Lady Douglas-Hamilton, are proof that positive news can be every bit as interesting and informative as negative.

So she proposes that the mass communications media, in effect, get with it. She says "inspiring news happens at least as often as uninspiring."

"Call it square if you like," she says, "but I'd like to see 'good news' broadcasts on every television station and 'good news' columns in every newspaper. I think people need to have a more balanced picture of their world. And really, I think they deserve to have it, too."

Skipping Stones Not So Simple

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (AP) — Keep your eye on the horizon, aim for minimum altitude and practice, practice, practice.

Those tips, coupled with large, ultra-flat stones for maximum skim, could win you the Little David Flat Stone Trophy Saturday in Mackinac Island's 1969 Stone Skipping and Geplunking Open Meet.

A retired Navy commander who once skipped a stone 17 times, will serve as a field judge.

He says of his great skip:

"That was under ideal circumstances. The lake was as flat as a flounder."

Number of skips alone will not win the trophy.

"An entrant may be penalized on defects in form and style," said W.T. Rabe, provost of the island's Stone Skipping and Plunking Club and marshall of the 1969 open.

"An accomplished stone skipper is poetry in motion. He skips a stone with one continuous movement of his entire body, holding his breath throughout, and ending with a great and audible exhale."

The island is in the Straits of Mackinac between Lakes Huron and Michigan.

The $2 entry fees will be turned over to Mackinac College which has announced it may close its doors after next year unless financial problems are solved.

Ge-plunking is primarily for children under four who have not mastered the art of skipping. Height of splash and volume of noise are the main factors in judging Ge-plunkers.

Income Increase Was Little Help

OREGON CITY, Ore. (AP) — Juanita Welch, a 41-year-old woman with a 12-year-old son, recently received a $10-per-month increase to $148 in her monthly allotment under a state program to improve the standard of living of welfare recipients.

Simultaneously, she said, she received a notice from the Clackamas County Housing Authority saying her rent would be increased from $59 to $69 per month.

Wallace M. Telford, executive director of the authority, said that as a renter's income increases, so does his rent for public housing.

Sex Education Where?

This business of sex education in the schools seems lately to have reached the proportions of a national controversy not unlike the one over Communists in the State Department a decade and a half ago.

Educators and lawmakers in state after state have been under pressure from various groups and individuals either to eliminate sex education programs already established or not to begin them at all.

In Louisiana a few weeks ago, the legislature overwhelmingly passed a bill prohibiting any form of sex instruction below the 9th grade, and prohibiting it above the 9th grade unless approved by the state board of education and the parent of each individual student.

Even this measure was too lenient for one legislator, who was quoted as saying, "We don't need no sex education in our schools."

Another legislator stated, "We keep alcohol and tobacco away from children until they're over 17 and we ought to keep this mess away from them, too."

The only trouble with this reasoning is that while laws may help to keep alcohol and tobacco away from children, they cannot keep from them the knowledge of the existence of such things.

If the analogy were valid, we ought also to ban the teaching to children of anything about the dangers and consequences of the use of alcohol and tobacco. But no one argues that children must be kept in ignorance about these temptations until some arbitrarily set age of "liberation."

The fact is, of course, that no law can prevent sex education. If it does not take place in the home (it rarely does) and if it is not to be permitted to take place in the classroom, that leaves only the street corner. And in that school of life, sex education is invariably miseducation.

Birth Control a Bitter Pill

The Indian government's intense efforts to encourage family planning have run into an unusual kind of opposition. It's reported that eunuchs in the state of Uttar Pradesh are campaigning against birth control.

With so few harems to guard these days, it seems that eunuchs in India earn their living by singing and dancing at weddings and at the births of children. The government, of course, is trying to cut down on the frequency of the latter.

"We cannot tolerate it," says a eunuch leader. "Singing and dancing to mark the birth of boy babies is our main source of income. We have launched our campaign against family planning to protect our very existence."

Officials complain that, in at least two areas, eunuchs have been singing antisterilization songs.

The consternation of family planning authorities is understandable. Who could have foreseen that eunuchs would contribute to the population problem?

Fear Declaration of Independence

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON — On July 4, 1951, during the Joseph McCarthy era, the Madison Capital Times in Wisconsin circulated a copy of the Declaration of Independence and The Bill of Rights in a Fourth of July crowd, seeking signatures.

Out of 112 people approached, only one would sign the two documents on which rest our basic freedoms.

Those who refused to sign called the documents "Communistic," and remarked that the "FBI ought to check up on this sort of thing," or that "my family is with the government and signing this might get them into trouble."

One man, reading Thomas Jefferson's stirring words "Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it," remarked: "That sounds Russian to me."

Their refusal to sign was first due to ignorance, second to fear. Many had not taken the trouble to read the great words which founded the republic.

The United States has come a long way from those days when the McCarthy committee reached into the State Department to find out what books were on its shelves, and into the churches to plague certain bishops who did not agree with the late senator from Wisconsin.

It has been 15 years since those days of fear and political persecution. Unfortunately, however, there are signs, faint at the moment but growing, that some of the fear of those McCarthy days is returning.

One sign is a private admission by the telephone company that it has received more requests from the Justice Department for wiretaps than ever before in history. There is also evidence that a small but persistent group of Americans is pushing the Nazi doctrine and preaching the idea that we made a mistake in fighting against Hitler.

Finally, there was the battle on the floor of the Senate last week over the confirmation of a product of the old McCarthy era, Otto Otepka, which ended by putting him on a board designed to sit in judgment on the loyalty of its fellow men, just as Joe McCarthy did back in the days when people were afraid to sign the Declaration of Independence and The Bill of Rights.

The debate over the Senate's confirmation of Otepka is significant. It showed some well-meaning and usually enlightened senators taking the same complacent view today that many senators did during the beginning of McCarthyism.

Not so some of the oldtimers who had lived through the McCarthy era; Clint Anderson, N.M., Clifford Case, N.J., Bill Fulbright, Ark., Warren Magnuson, Wash., Mike Mansfield, Mont., Stuart Symington, Mo., John Sherman Cooper, Ky., Ed Muskie, Me., Gene McCarthy, Minn., George McGovern, S.D., together with many hard-hitting younger senators such as Ted Kennedy and Joe Tydings, voted to send the Otepka nomination back to committee.

So did Steve Young, elder statesman from Ohio, who delivered a ringing warning that: "It has been established beyond any possible doubt that the Liberty Lobby, headed by Willis Carto, whose fascist inclinations and associations have been well documented, was one of his (Otepka's) staunchest champions. That neo-Nazi lunatic group produced and distributed a film entitled 'The Otepka Case.'"

Sen. Tom Eagleton, former lieutenant governor of Missouri, also warned: "Otepka was charged with violating a presidential directive of March 13, 1948 ... I can't see how under the circumstances the Senate can now give its advice and consent to elevate Mr. Otepka to a position of even higher prestige and power in the field of security."

Warned Charlie Goodell, New York Republican: "The Internal Security Act which created this board (on which Otepka is to serve) was enacted at the height of the Joseph McCarthy era. President Truman, with the full support of J. Edgar Hoover, recognized its dangers and vetoed it."

Despite these warnings, a majority of the Senate listened to Tom Dodd, Conn., the Senate's No. 1 witch-hunter, or felt that a presidential appointment must be honored. They confirmed Otepka. Among the confirmers there were such intelligent senators as Marlow Cook, Ky., Mac Mathias, Md., Richard Schweiker, Pa., and Jim Pearson, Kans.

—Summer Reading—

The nation this week devotes most of its issue to an interview with Drew Pearson, featuring a lot of things I wish I'd left unsaid ... Liz Carpenter, one-time press secretary to Lady Bird Johnson, is spoofed by Ralph Schoenstein in a book "My Year in the White House Doghouse." He reproduces a manuscript which Liz meat-axed showing how carefully she protected Lady Bird. One sentence which got cut was: "He (LBJ) shook hands with Blanco (the White House dog) five times more than he'd shaken with the chief of naval intelligence." ... One thing the public will not be able to read this summer is a fascinating story by Liz Smith regarding the staff of Sen. Tom Dodd. It's called "A Secretary is Not a Toy." But Cosmopolitan Magazine which ordered the story is still sitting on it, and it will probably never appear. Reason is reported to be Sen. Dodd's influence on second-class postal rates.

Prosaic Firsts

Some of the accomplishments of the Apollo 10 astronauts were very little things — like spooning chicken salad with a real spoon onto real bread to make a sandwich instead of sucking a meal out of a tube, or shaving with shaving cream and an ordinary razor.

Not exactly what you would call space "firsts" in the spectacular sense, but still adding up to the closest thing to normal living that any previous astronauts experienced. That in itself was no minor achievement.

Take the matter of the bread.

"First of all, we tried to design a bread that wouldn't crumble," says Dr. Malcolm C. Smith, food technologist for the Apollo program in Houston. "You can't have an astronaut eating a sandwich with crumbs flying all over the cabin."

As it turned out, however, a new kind of bread wasn't necessary. After much experimentation, the experts found two commercial brands of white bread that stood up quite well (neither whole wheat nor pumpernickel passed the test).

No astronaut has as yet enjoyed a real home-cooked meal in space, but the day is coming. The next priority, says Smith, is the development of space-going heaters and freezers that can offer astronauts greater variety in their meals.

This will take some time, for cooking aboard a spacecraft is risky business, what with heating coils and food odors that could contaminate the cabin atmosphere. There will be no hot meals served aboard Apollo 11, the moon landing mission scheduled for July 16.

But then, those pioneers are going to have a lot more on their minds than what's for supper.

Silver Coin Market

The Treasury's sudden decision to lift the ban on melting silver coins has thrown the buying and selling market into a state of confusion. While the Silver Users Association warns that this decision may depress the price of silver, "dealers" are offering to buy $1,000 bags of silver coins at from 8.5 per cent to 24 per cent over face and insist they will not be overbid regardless of the market.

All offers are tied directly to the daily spot price of silver but some escalate as the spot price increases. For example: At $1.69 per ounce the buying price by the dealer would be roughly 8.5 per cent or $1,085 for a $1,000 bag of silver coins. At $2 per ounce the offer rises to 24 per cent of face or $1,240 for the same bag. However, this small profit is reduced slightly by the seller having to prepay shipping cost, plus insurance cost.

It should be remembered that the price closing a deal is the price that exists the day the coins are received by the buyer, not the price the day they are shipped. This could be a sizable factor in the amount received for a bag of coins taking three days to one week to deliver.

Prior to the revocation of the melting ban silver closed at $1.7460 and after the announcement by Secretary Kennedy it rose to $1.77, dropping to $1.705 before leveling off at $1.7460. This would indicate $1.75 as a good round figure until something really spectacular happens in the world silver picture.

Using the $1.75 per ounce spot price, it is interesting to look at the value of U.S. silver coinage with a 90 per cent silver content. The dime contains 12.8 cents worth of silver and 10,000 dimes in a $1,000 bag would be worth roughly $1,280. The present market price is approximately $1,130, less shipping charges and insurance.

In cases where the percentage increases with the escalation of the price per ounce, a dime would contain 14½ cents worth of silver at a spot price of $2 per ounce, making a $1,000 bag value of $1,450, with a buying offer of 29 per cent over face or roughly $1,290, less shipping and insurance.

Anyone planning to sell sizable amounts of silver coins on this market should do two things. First, make sure that all of the coins in one bag are silver. Secondly, purchase a copy of "Coin World" and check the dealer making the best offer.

I suggest that all offers be verified against daily market quotations. Some smaller communities have been visited by "roving" dealers buying small quantities of silver coins and making ridiculously low offers to justify the fact that they are saving the seller time and money in out-of-town transactions.

Resentment is increasing toward placing President Dwight D. Eisenhower's likeness on the new $1 coin if that coin is to be made of cupro-nickel as recommended by the Joint Commission on the Coinage. It isn't really necessary. The Coinage Act of 1965 provided for the minting of silver dollars in 1970 and if there is no longer a shortage of silver insofar as the Treasury is concerned, why not issue the Eisenhower dollar in silver?

We tried to find a real fireworks hand for today but instead came up with quite the opposite. The locale was a New York tournament of the middle '30s. West and East were two of that day's experts. South was an attractive girl named Helen White.

Attractive or not, experts have always expected top scores against newcomers. West realized everything was going to be especially good when the young lady called for dummy's queen of diamonds on the second play of that suit. Obviously she was so scared playing in a big tournament that she was one trick ahead of herself.

West continued with the jack and East saw no reason not to discard a club.

Miss White proceeded to ruff with the deuce. Then she entered dummy with the jack of clubs, led the jack of spades and let it ride to West's king. Later on she finessed trumps a second time and made her spade game.

At other tables the queen of diamonds was not played until the third diamond lead and invariably East ruffed with the six of trumps. Then this made it impossible for declarer to get away without losing two trump tricks.

This hand also shows the advantage of being unknown. One year later or today, we rather fear the young lady who is now known to bridge players as Helen Sobel Smith might try the same play and it might work but not because of the fact her opponents wouldn't know they were playing against the game's greatest woman player.

Ho May Be Getting Set for Secret Deal

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON —(NEA)

Some of President Nixon's analysts see signs the growing Sino-Soviet conflict may be bringing hard pressure on Ho Chi Minh to reach some sort of an accommodation in South Vietnam.

When Ho began arming his men with modern Chinese weapons and his cities with Soviet antiaircraft arms, he made himself dependent on continuous doses of heavy aid from Peking and Moscow.

If China and Russia become too deeply involved, the danger is Red China will cut sharply its supply of weapons, ammunition, food and other assistance. Russian aid, which comes largely by rail through China, would likewise almost certainly be curtailed heavily. The closing of the Suez Canal has already made shipping Soviet material to Hanoi by sea, more expensive.

Ho knows these facts He has already issued orders to his troops to conserve arms, ammunition and other war material.

There are signs Hanoi calculates future replacements may be somewhat limited.

Temporarily at least the amount of war supplies carried down the Ho Chi Minh trails seems to have dwindled.

One elementary rule of guerrilla war is that to be successful, the guerrilla must have time on his side. He must be able to outwit the enemy at the conference table. He must have time to work on enemy public opinion and morale. He must have time to whittle slowly at enemy economic and political strength He must give the impression that he is willing andable to stay at the game forever, if necessary.

Once time is no longer on its side, a guerrilla operation loses much of its strength. Farmers, officials, merchants and workers, who have been bearing the load of the war for 15 or 20 years, figure they can waitout another year or two. Resistance to the guerrillas rises. Their political and military strength begins to fade.

To some analysts here, the creation by the Communists of the Provisional Revolutionary Government may indicate Ho now believes time is no longer with him.

The important fact about that new "government" is that some old familiar faces have now faded to the background. All those in the National Liberation Front who were not tightly disciplined members of the Hanoi-operated Communist party were eliminated from the top positions in the new "government."

A guerrilla force — when it is growing — expands politically by the creation of a series of fronts, attempting to draw in larger and larger numbers of the population and key men with a wide following in various areas of the society.

Normally, such fronts become open Communist groups when the battle is won, the Reds are taking over, or when a crisis has been reached and the guerrillas must retrench and take hard-handed action in which orders from above are quickly and unquestionably obeyed, regardless of who or what is sacrificed in the operation.

Since the Communists have not taken over in South Vietnam, some administration Vietnam watchers reason Hanoi is clearing the ineffectives and wobblies out of the Viet Cong ranks preparatory to hard secret political bargaining with the South Vietnamese.

Even if these analysts are correct, and Ho is now ready for a deal, Ho's concept of time is such that the talks could take a year, or two years.

Age Is Causative Factor In Cataract Formation

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q — What causes cataracts? Are there any drops that will delay their development?

A — Since cataracts are found in an increasing proportion with each decade of life over 50, age is a causative factor. Others include diabetes, exposure to intense heat or light, prolonged use of certain tranquilizers and watching television at too close a range (less than 10 feet over a period of 20 or more years). There are no drops that will dissolve cataracts or delay their formation.

Q — I have nuclear cataracts. What is the prognosis and what treatment do you recommend?

A — A nuclear, in contrast to a marginal, cataract causes the greatest blocking of vision. It should be removed, following which your vision will be restored although you will have to wear special lenses.

Q — A cataract is developing in my husband's left eye. Would close work aggravate it?

A — Close work neither causes nor aggravates a cataract but the cataract may make close work difficult until it is removed.

Q — I have a cataract in one eye but don't want it operated on. What do you advise?

A — Operation. Some new, improved techniques make this less of an ordeal than it was several years ago.

Q — Are laser beams used to treat cataracts?

A — They have been used to treat retinal detachment and certain tumors within the eye, but not cataracts.

Q — If a cataract is removed from one eye, must one have a special lens for that eye?

A — Yes.

Q — I am a woman, 73, and my doctor is giving me iron for anemia. Could too much cause iron poisoning?

A — The daily iron requirement for a normal woman over 55 is 10 milligrams. If a woman has anemia, the maintenance dose would be higher but she would have to take over 50 milligrams a day for a prolonged period to develop iron poisoning.

NEWSDAY: The Lemon Grove. — Judging by a recent study made by the Automobile Club of Missouri, if all the disgruntled owners of defective cars in the U.S. were to paint lemons on them, the nation would be transformed into a vast lemon grove.

The club tested 10,000 cars for safety defects and found them in half of the latest models and in 90 per cent of cars over five years old. In this country 53,000 die annually in traffic accidents. Yet only 31 states require periodic motor vehicle inspections. This is scandalous.

Chicago Comes To Town Hoping To Bury Cards

ST.LOUIS (AP)—The St.Louis Cardinals were practically killed by the New York Mets and now the Chicago Cubs come to town hoping to bury them.

The four-game series begins today with either Ferguson Jenkins or Dick Selma presiding for the Cubs. Righthander Bob Gibson is to represent what the Cubs hope is the decreased.

Manager Red Schoendienst admittedly has little to work with in the battle against the forces of Leo Durocher. The Mets' 8-1 victory Thursday practically depleted the Cardinals' overworked, under - supported and sometimes ineffective pitching staff.

"The starter is going to have to go a long way," Red moaned after using five pitchers in the series windup against the Mets. The Mets took three of the five games and now the Cardinals are only in the same division as the Cubs, if not the same class.

Schoendienst's other big worry is the Cardinals' scoring. There isn't any. They got one run against rookie Gary Gentry, but that didn't stand up very well after Tommy Agee and Donn Clendenon each drove in a pair of runs.

"I've never seen the club like this," Schoendienst said. "In 1965 we had a lot of trouble scoring runs, but not this hard." In 1965 the Cardinals wound up in the second division.

The Cardinals have had streaks before when they couldn't pick up men in scoring position with none or one out, but it's never lasted this long, Schoendienst said.

Third base coach George Kissell agreed.

"I've never seen a black cloud hang in one place for so long," Kissell said. "Three or four days, but not three or four weeks."

In the third inning, for instance, the Cardinals had men on second and third with none out. After three were out those men were still on second and third.

Big Slump Has Ended For Sykes

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — The long slump was over for lean and lanky Dick Sykes, but the soft spoken man from Arkansas held off any celebration.

"Tomorrow is the big day," he said Thursday after firing a course record matching 65 and tying Homere Blancas for the first-round lead in the $125,000 Buick Open Golf Tournament.

"If I can break 70 in the second round, I'll feel that I have it back.

"I've had a rough time for the last few months," the 29-year-old said. "I haven't played well in 11 weeks. I couldn't keep it on the track. I just didn't know where it was going."

He credited some help from Tommy Bolt, the Senior's champion, and encouragement from his family with the sudden upturn in his game.

"I was on the plane with Tommy going from Charlotte to Cleveland," he said, "and we talked a lot. It was nothing you could put your finger on — more mental than anything.

"And in Cleveland I followed him around during practice, just watching what he was doing. It helped a lot.

"Then Tuesday in a practice round, the swing suddenly was in the groove. It had the right feeling with the putter. I felt I could knock it in from anywhere."

He may not have been quite that good—but it was close. The 6-foot-2, 155-pounder had 10 one-putt greens and used only 26 putts in his remarkable round. He had eight birdies and a single bogey, the latter when he caught a trap.

Sykes, no relation to Dan Sykes, hasn't finished higher than a tie for 27th in his 11 week slump and has missed the cut six times.

Blancas, 31, who hasn't won since 1966, called his effort, "the finest round of golf I've played this year. I was hitting the right club and that eagle on the sixth hole got me charged up."

Blancas and Sykes held a two-stroke lead on a group of five tied at 67. They are Terry Dill, Don Bies, Deane Beman, Bob Lunn and Bob Dickson.

Nine others were at 68, four under par on the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills Country Club course, with another large group at 69, including Sam Snead, PGA title holder Julius Boros and defending champion Tom Weiskopf.

Most of the game's top names including Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Gary Player passed up the event.

S-H Cheerleaders Win

Winning Cheerleaders

The cheerleaders team from Sacred Heart High School came back with their share of honors after attending the National Cheerleaders Association summer camp held on the campus of Northwest Missouri State College, Maryville.

The girls, Janet Gonser, Mary Beth Bazin, Linda Huhman and Teresa Hogan won five blue ribbons in daily evaluation. This marks the fourth year the Sacred Heart varsity team has won an outstanding number of honors at the NCA meeting.

The Sacred Heart group competed with some 500 girls from Missouri, Illinois, Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas. Eighty-five other squads attended this session, which ran from June 22 through June 27. Sacred Heart was competing with 22 other schools in their division, which was for varsity teams with four or five girls on the team. The local girls are proud to have won all blue ribbons.

The cheerleaders were judged on spirit, motions, stunts and over-all appearance. The Gremlin cheerleaders expressed confidence that the daily blue ribbons for "superior" ratings were a suitable reward for their weeks of practice and preparation for the meet.

Daily workouts for the girls in practice sessions prepared them for the meeting. Other preparations included a do-nut sale at the school, sponsored by the girls to raise money for their trip to Maryville and their expenses while there.

The Coca Cola company of Maryville sponsored an "all-round best squad" award, which went to Bishop Lablonde of St. Joseph.

The "Spark Plug" award was awarded to the squad that showed the best spirit and enthusiasm during the week. This award was won by Warrensburg High. This award was sponsored by Champion Spark Plugs.

The Gremlin cheerleading squad is now waiting for the new school year so they can use their spirit and enthusiasm to spark Sacred Heart teams to a record season.

Slender Hope For Pennants

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Fourth of July overtook the St. Louis Cardinals and Kansas City Royals today with neither harboring more than slender outside hopes for baseball pennants at the traditional halfway point in the season.

Both Missouri teams hoped to get back on the winning side in home holiday appearances today.

The Cardinals were to entertain the National League East-leading Chicago Cubs in a single game this afternoon, while the Royals were due to host the Seattle Pilots in a doubleheader this afternoon.

Independence Day found the Cardinals mired in fifth place, 14½ games behind the surprising Cubs.

It also caught the expansionist Royals in fifth place, 12 games behind the American League West-leading Oakland A's.

St. Louis lost 8-1 to the New York Mets Thursday, while Kansas City bowed 4-3 to the California Angels.

The Cards succumbed to the five-hit pitching of Gary Gentry, who hails from Kansas City. St. Louis didn't score off Gentry until the seventh, after the Mets already had seven runs.

Gentry, now 8-6, gave up a run on singles by Joe Torre and Julian Javier around a walk to Mike Shannon. Tommie Agee led an early assault against loser Mudcat Grant, 4-9 with his 11th homerun.

The Royals, playing before their smallest home crowd, 3,454, nearly pulled it out in the last of the ninth when Seattle reliever Ken Tatum walked in one run to make it 4-3. But Tatum then struck out Joe Foy—fourth strikeout of the game by Foy—to end it.

A wild pitch and Lou Piniella's single got the first two Royals runs.

Star Racer Seeks His Old Form

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Top Knight, the shining light of the Florida Winter circuit who dimmed considerably in May, will attempt to turn on his old form Saturday in the $25,000 Lamplighter Stakes at Monmouth Park.

Mrs. Steven B. Wilson's Vertex colt, the 2-year-old champion of 1968, won the Flamingo and Florida Derby impressively but then finished out of the money in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, his last start.

Top Knight has been assigned topweight of 125 pounds and could be opposed by six including Pelican Stable's Al Hattab, the Jersey Derby winner, 124, and Michael J. Stova's More Asian, 116.

Four of Saturday's features will be run on the grass, and three of them are each worth $50,000-added—the Sheepshead Bay Handicap at Aqueduct, the Round Table Handicap at Arlington Park, and the Cinema Handicap at Hollywood Park. The other is the $25,000-added Sussex Turf Handicap at Delaware Park.

The top stakes on today's holiday card were the $100,000-added Suburban Handicap at Aqueduct, the $50,000-added Stars and Stripes Handicap on the grass at Arlington Park and the $50,000 American Handicap in two divisions on the turf at Hollywood Park.

Another race of keen interest today was the $25,000-added Post-Deb Stakes at Monmouth in which the two top-flight 3-year-old fillies, Process Shot and Gallant Bloom, were scheduled to meet.

A field of at least 14 fillies and mares is expected for the 1 3-16 mile Sheepshead Bay, with Happy Hill Farm's Ludham, the highweight at 122 pounds. Other probables include Hobeau Farm's Harem Lady, 116, and George D. Widener's Mount Regina and Lazy F. Ranch's Treacherous, 113 each.

Volunteer Hearing Test For Umpire After Ruling

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Baseball umpires frequently hear suggestions from fans and players that they should have their eyesight checked, but the Kansas City Royals were volunteering to give Larry Napp a hearing test Thursday.

Napp said he heard nothing when an errant pitch from Wally Bunker appeared to just about everybody in the ballpark to skip off the batting helmet of California Angels pitcher Andy Messersmith. The sound of the ball nicking something was clearly audible in the pressbox above.

However, Napp ruled the ball had hit nothing, letting a runner come home from third to score the eventual winning run in the Angels' 4-3 triumph over the Royals.

"I'm positive the ball glanced off the top of Messersmith's helmet," Royals Manager Joe Gordon said later. "I think the guy said it hit him before it dawned on him that it would cost them a run. Then, he kept his mouth shut."

Messersmith said after the game he thinks the ball may have clipped the catcher's glove. Napp stood by his decision that he had heard nothing.

"All I know," Gordon added, "is the ball hit something—either his bat or him. Either way, the ball is dead and the run doesn't score."

Jim Spencer, who had led off the inning with a single and moved to third on Joe Azcue's single, scored the winning run.

It gave California a 4-2 lead.

The Angels got two runs in the first on Johnstone's single and Jim Fregosi's sixth home run.

They made it 3-0 in the top of the fourth on Rick Reichardt's double and Bill Voss' single.

Messersmith, who yielded two runs in the fourth when the Royals bunched three of their six hits, struck out the side in the eighth to run his whiff total in the game to nine, then was replaced by Manager Lefty Phillips when he walked the leadoff man in the ninth.

Ken Tatum, who relieved Messersmith, got into trouble by giving up a single to Lou Piniella and hitting Ed Kirkpatrick to load the bases.

A walk to Chuck Harrison pulled the Royals to within one run, but Tatum struck out Joe Foy to end the game.

"Messersmith had reached back to strike out the side in the eighth," Phillips said, "so I thought it was time to get somebody fresh in there. I figured the eighth was his last measure of strength in that heat."

Trotters' Honor To Frank Ervin

Three of harness racing's greatest trainer-drivers, Frank Ervin, brother of Colie Ervin of Sedalia, Delvin Miller and Bill Haughton, received the sport's highest honor this week: enshrinement in the Hall of Fame of the Trotter in Goshen, N.Y.

The trio, along with U.S. Trotting Association president and distinguished breeder Walter J. Michael, were voted into the Hall in nationwide balloting by the U.S. Harness Writers Association, and were formally invested as living members Wednesday in ceremonies at the Trotting Horse Museum. Only six other men in harness racing, owners E. Roland Harriman and Octave Blake, breeder Lawrence B. Sheppard, trainer-driver Bion Shively, starter Steve Phillips and track executive George Morton Levy, have been similarly honored.

Softball Schedule Changed

The doubleheader scheduled Thursday night at Green Ridge between Green Ridge and Dr. Pepper again had to be cancelled dur to water standing on the diamonds.

The Dr. Pepper team will travel to Clarksburg Saturday July 5, for a doubleheader with the first game scheduled to get underway at 7 o'clock, then return Monday night for a doubleheader at Housel Park with the newly-organized Warrensburg Mets playing in their new uniforms.

Warrensburg is said to have a young hustling club. First game Monday night is set for 7 o'clock. This is one of that games that was originally scheduled early between these two clubs, but was cancelled due to rain.

When Stymie won the 1946 Saratoga Cup he was the last horse to win a walkover race in New York state. He was the only entrant in the race.

Collection of Tubes Can Be Put to Good Use

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Tell Pearl she can cover her tissue tubes with pretty paper glued on and then pack with such items as scarves and handerchiefs to be given as gifts. The tubes can be wrapped attractively.

She also can unfasten her clothesline, slip tubes from paper towels along its full length, then hang freshly laundered blankets to dry with no fear of center creases made by the clothesline.

Also, magazines, large sheets of paper and even some pictures can be rolled and slipped into such tubes for safe mailing.—OLLIE

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Pearl that our club welfare group cut rolls from paper products into 2½-inch lengths and covered them with crepe paper to look like the party favors you buy. We bought different colors of paper and curling ribbon for tying. The paper was cut about four inches longer than the rolls, put around them, taped together to hold it on and then one end tied with ribbon. This was for Easter and we put an Easter seal on the side. These were sent to a hospital to be put on holiday food trays. They could also be used for children's parties and other occasions.—AGNES

DEAR POLLY—Pearl wanted to know how to make use of the tubes from inside paper towels and bathroom tissue rolls. The most practical use I have found is to stuff them with newspaper and use for fire starters in the fireplace. Do not stuff too tightly but leave room for air to circulate. —JOHN

DEAR POLLY and Pearl—I make napkin rings out of paper product tubes. Cut to the desired length and cover with splashy, self-adhesive paper to match your table setting. They are very attractive, eye-catching and bring many compliments. Inexpensive, too.—M. E.

DEAR POLLY—Instead of buying cards to mail to those who were absent from church for one reason or another, I have been appointed to collect the left-over church bulletins each Sunday. A note is written on the bottom saying that the person was missed. This is mailed to them instead of the usual card and they get the church news, too.—MRS. A. S.

DEAR POLLY—I used to lose so many needles in my pincushion until I hit on the idea of leaving thread in a needle. If it does get pushed completely into the pincushion, I can retrieve it by grasping the thread.—MRS. L. A. B.

American League Roundup

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Reggie Jackson, Reggie Jackson, Reggie Jackson. Talk about Oakland and it's always Reggie Jackson.

But the A's also have Lew Krausse, Phil Roof, patience and speed. That combination, not Reggie Jackson, sent the Athletics' rolling to a 6-4 victory over the Seattle Pilots Thursday.

While Reggie was being held homerless, Krausse, a pitcher, and batterymate Roof both hit their second home runs of the season for three runs, two more scored on bases loaded walks and another scampered in on a passed ball.

The victory moved the first place A's from three percentage points to a full game ahead of Minnesota in the American League's West Division as the Twins were beaten by the Chicago White Sox 5-4 on Bill Melton's 11th inning homer.

In other games on the all-afternoon AL schedule, Detroit took second place from Boston in the East by beating the Red Sox 4-3, Cleveland upended Washington 7-2 and California nipped Kansas City 4-3. Baltimore and the New York Yankees were idle.

Jackson, who hit three homers Wednesday night and five in three games to give him a whopping 33, managed only a single and a walk in five at bats, striking out twice and grounding out. But this time, the A's didn't need him.

Krausse homered in the third inning to tie the score 1-1, and Roof's blast followed a walk in the fourth for a 3-1 lead.

Then in the fifth after Rick Monday singled and Jackson fanned, the real fun began. Sal Bando beat out an infield hit and Danny Cater beat out a bunt to load the bases.

Knuckleballer Jim Bouton relieved loser Gary Roggenburk, 1-2, and the A's stood by patiently while he walked in two runs and Bando sped home with a third on a passed ball.

Krausse, 2-3, finally left with two out in the sixth when Rich Rollins belted a homer with two on, but relievers Marcel Lachemann, Jim Roland and Rollie Fingers held off the Pilots the res rest of the way, as the A's won their seventh game in nine outings.

However, they lost Bert Campaneris to a chipped bone on an index finger and Mike Hershberger to a shoulder separation. Each will be out about four weeks.

Melton lowered the boom on Minnesota with his 13th homer, opening the 11th against Ron Perranoski, 4-4. It ended Chicago's five-game losing streak and the Twins' four-game winning spree.

Luis Aparicio had driven in two runs and scored two with a single and a double as the White Sox took a 4-0 lead. It was 4-2 in the ninth when Frank Quilici, who replaced the league's leading hitter, Rod Carew — a strike out victim four times — singled in a run and Rich Reese hit a pinch-hit trying single.

Detroit completed a three-game sweep of its series with Boston by scoring four times in the fourth inning after Carl Yastrzemski had put the Red Sox ahead 1-0 with his 22nd homer.

Bill Freehan tied it with his 11th homer, off loser Ray Culp, 10-6, and after an error, a walk and a bunt single by winner Joe Sparma, 5-4, Mickey Stanley singled in two runs and Dick McAuliffe hit a sacrifice fly.

Luis Tiant, 7-8, pitched a four-hitter for Cleveland—two of the hits were Frank Howard's 27th homer and Mike Epstein's 19th—to stop Washington's six-game winning streak.

The Indians wrapped up the game in the third when Camilo Pascual, 2-5, walked in two runs and Russ Snyder doubled in three.

Jim Fregosi hit a two-run homer for California in the first inning and the Angels later made it 4-2 with a run on a disputed wild pitch that the Royals claimed either hit winner Andy Messersmith's bat or batting helmet in the seventh inning.

Reliever Ken Tatao walked in a run in the ninth, but saved the victory by striking out Joe Foy with the bases loaded and two out.

National League Roundup

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

Montreal's Mike Wegener has discovered what other National League pitchers have begun to expect when they wrestle with the Chicago Cubs:

Keeping Don Kessinger off the basepaths is about as easy as getting Billy Williams to take a day of rest.

Kessinger, the Cubs' dandy shortstop broke up Wegener's no-hit bid Thursday with a sixth inning triple, then cracked a two-run, go-ahead double in a seven-run seventh that gave the East Division leaders an 8-4 victory over the Expos.

Williams, extending his NL endurance record to 900 consecutive games, also drove in a pair of seventh inning runs with a single and Ron Santo capped the explosion with a to-run homer.

The victory kept Chicago 7½ games ahead of the second place New York Mets, who smashed St. Louis 8-1 behind rookie Gary Gentry's five-hitter.

West Division leading Atlanta edged San Francisco 5-4 and moved 1½ lengths in front of the runner-up Los Angeles Dodgers, who bowed to Cincinnati 4-3 in 11 innings in the only night game on the schedule.

Kessinger, a leading candidate for the shortstop spot on the NL All-Star team, boosted his batting average to .296 with his 98th and 99th hits of the season. The slender switch-hitter, who began his fifth big league season with a .239 lifetime average, appears certain to surpass his 1968 high of 157 hits.

He shares the league lead in runs scored, 60, with San Francisco's Bobby Bonds and his 23 doubles are three shy of pacesetter Matty Alou of Pittsburgh.

"The pitchers can't fool him anymore," said teammate Williams. "He's a tough man to keep on base."

Trailing 3-1 in the seventh, the Cubs filled the bases on singles by Willie Smith, Randy Hundley and Jim Qualls. A walk to pinch hitter Al Spangler forced across one run and Kessinger's double sent Chicago ahead 4-3, finishing Wegener. Williams' two-run single and Santo's 16th homer completed the rally against reliever Dan McGinn.

Dick Selma, who worked the first six innings for the Cubs, picked up his ninth victory against three losses.

Tommie Agee crashed a lead-off homer in the first inning at St. Louis and Gentry, 8-6 breezed past the Cardinals with the help of a four-run fourth keyed by Donn Clendenon's two-run single.

Agree also drew a bases-loaded walk in the fourth and walked and scored again in the eighth.

Seven consecutive singles, including a two-run poke by pitcher George Stone, gave the Braves four second inning runs at San Francisco and they hung on for their sixth straight victory.

Stone, 8-2, needed relief help from his cousin, Cecil Upshaw, in the eighth, striking out pinch hitter Willie Mays after the Giants had closed the gap with a three-run rally.

Lee May's 23rd homer, after a double by Tony Perez in the 11th, gave Cincinnati a 4-2 lead and the Reds held off a Dodger comeback in the bottom of the inning. Wayne Granger came out of the bullpen to get the last out, stranding runners on second and third after a run-scoring single by Ted Sizemore had closed the gap.

Hope To Equal Tennis Record

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Mrs. Billie Jean King hoped to celebrate American Independence Day today by equalling a Wimbledon record that has stood for 39 years.

The little volleying specialist from Long Beach, Calif., needed victory over her old British rival, Mrs. Ann Jones, to become the first woman since Helen Wills to win the Wimbledon singles crown four years running. Helen Wills—later Mrs. Wills Moody—won it from 1927 to 1930 and went on to take the title four more times in the next eight years.

Mrs. Jones, 30-year-old hope of the British fans, tours the world with Mrs. King in the professional group controlled by promoter George MacCall. The English player admitted that Billie Jean was more likely to win.

"She has won more times against me than I have won against her," Mrs. Jones said.

"On slow clay courts I always consider I am in with the best of them. On grass I rate my chances lower.

"Don't tell me that Billie Jean has not been on her best form recently. I was told the same last year, and the year before that. She is such a great competitor that she is always difficult to beat on the big day."

The other remaining U.S. hope, Arthur Ashe of Richmind, Va., bowed out Thursday in the semi-finals of the men's singles to defending champion Rod Laver of Australia. So Laver and Billie Jean now are in a position to make Wimbledon history.

If Laver beats John Newcombe for the men's crown, and Billie Jean wins the women's, it will be the first time since the present competitive set-up was inaugurated in 1923 that both reigning champions have retained their titles in the same year.

It last happened in 1921, when Bill Tilden of the United States and Suzanne Lenglen of France both defended their crowns successfully.

But in those days the tournament was run on the lines of the Davis Cup and the champion was only called upon to play in the Challenge Round.

Ashe, the reigning U.S. National champion, had his Wimbledon hopes shattered by Laver in the semifinals for the second straight year.

The score was 2-6, 6-2, 9-7, 6-0. Laver, hitting powerfully and planning his game with calculating shrewdness, learned to keep the ball away from Ashe's backhand after the American had hit a stream of winners to take the first set.

Newcombe outlasted Tony Roche 3-6, 6-1, 14-12, 6-4 in the other semifinal. The two Australians fought it out for two hours, 45 minutes before an absorbed crowd of 15,000 on Wimbledon's center court.

Ann Jones, now 30, has been in the Women's semifinals eight times before and the final once, but never has won the crown.

Billie Jean was sure to face a pro-British crowd today—but it was the same in 1967, when she vanquished Mrs. Jones in the final.

The men's final Saturday is for a first prize of $7,200. The women are shooting for a first prize of $3,600.

The University of Washington football team will play Michigan State at East Lansing, Mich., on Sept. 20 and then face Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Sept. 27. The team will stay in the state until heading home.

Good Life on Ship

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — (NEA) — Stretched out on the cargo deck of the Delta Queen, sipping a bourbon and water smuggled below by a passenger, an aged deckhand proposed a toast in the glow of the rapidly setting sun, saying, "Here's to the Queen — after she goes, won't nobody take her place."

And so it was that on a warm night, with a flag-snapping breeze playing the role of Mother Nature's air conditioning for her partying passengers, the Delta Queen slid past the fertile fields of Kentucky on her way to Cincinnati, looking very much like a ghostly figure out of an old Clark Gable movie.

In this age of supersonic transports, moon landings and miniskirts, the Queen seems strangely out of place, churning up the Ohio River, giving off a steady hiss as her massive stern wheel tosses water into the air.

There was a time when ships like this cruised the Mississippi and its tributaries in large numbers. No one is sure how many there once were, but today the Queen is the last of the paddle-wheel steamships in the United States equipped to shelter passengers overnight. There are just three other stern-wheelers still afloat: the City of Louisville, a day boat, and two others that belong to the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

With accommodations for 190 passengers, the 285-foot Queen sails 35,000 miles a year under the direction of Capt. Ernest Wagner and a crew of 76.

"She was built in 1926," Wagner says, showing a half dozen guests through the pilot house, "and I don't have to tell you that they're not building them like this any more. She's a queen in every sense of the word."

Two decks below, safely out of Wagner's hearing, a reporter settles down at the bar to watch the Queen pick her way through the bevy of small craft that speed out from every town along the way to pay their respects to royalty.

"Reminds me of the old Hudson River Dayline," remarks the guest, drawing a frown from Bob, a youthful bartender who spends almost eight hours a day whipping up mint juleps.

"Don't know what it is," he smiles, ignoring the irreverant comparison, "but a guy who drinks nothing but rye and water all year will turn into a mint julep man as soon as he sets foot on this ship. Seems like the thing to do."

Back on the bridge, Capt. Wagner answers questions, half listening to the high-pitched music of the caliope drift toward shore. "Speed doesn't mean much to our guests," he says, fingering some papers. "People come aboard because they like our style of getting places. It's a good life."

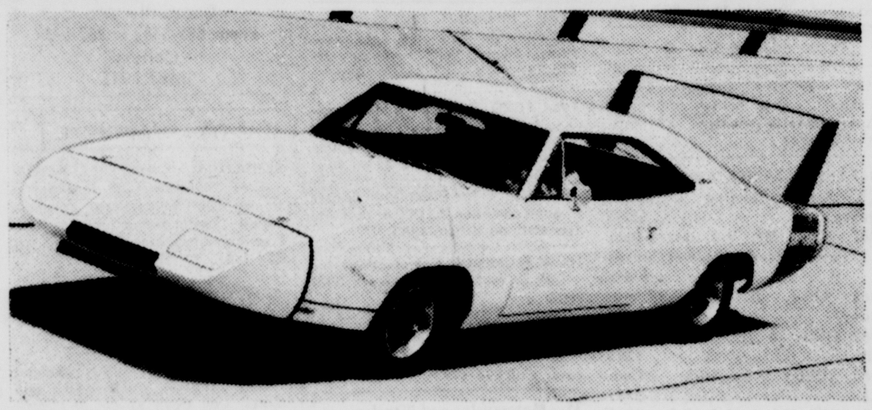

In the lounge, where long-gowned Southern belles smile happily and pass the time with the guests, a New Yorker in a checkered sport coat tries to shift a conversation away from the river pirates, who once waited in prey in the caves along these shores, to Vietnam — only to find himself talking to four empty chairs as his would-be listeners make hasty excuses and exit.

On this night, at this moment, with the Delta Queen seemingly drifting backward in time at a rate exceeding her speed up the Ohio, wars, taxes, population explosions, generation gaps and missile systems no longer seem to exist.

As the captain said, it's a good life.

Texans George Sauer, Don Maynard, Pete Lammons, Winston Hill, Jim Hudson and John Elliott started for the New York Jets in their Super Bowl victory over Baltimore last January.

Race Victories Sell Cars

INCREDIBLE: Dodge's new car is the Charger Daytona, a wild, wild creation. Note the rear-end spoiler.

By BOB COCHNAR
NEA Automotive Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The automotive gospel according to Leo Beebe says,succinctly, "Race on Sunday, sell on Monday." The Detroit boys who happen to be blessed with smarts follow it assiduously.

Beebe is the Ford executive who, with approval of Henry II, brought the company back to racing and delivered its first win at the 24 Hours of LeMans. And as he used to explain it, racing sells cars.

While nobody has yet been able to equate prowess on the track with unit sales in the showroom statistically, there is sufficient evidence to justify enormous corporate expenditure in racing.

For example, when Cale Yarborough won the Daytona 500 last year in a Mercury Cyclone, southern Motors remains officially not involved with racing. Hah!

Ford and Chrysler Corp. had other ideas. These two manufacturers score their points, for the most part, on the NASCAR superspeedways. So, reasoned Ford, why not create a Ford Talledega—after Bill France's new track in Alabama? And so it was done.

Not to be one-upped by Ford, Dodge entered the lists with a Charger Daytona, an absolutely wild automobile which must be seen to be believed. Likely beneficiary here is Big Daddy France.

American Motors, which finally won a few races after trying hard for a year, has not yet identified its cars to racing through a nameplate. But it's likely to come.

The Detroit folk still have a few names from which to choose. Don't be surprised if one day to spy a Chevrolet Riverside roaring down the freeway. Or a Ford Indianapolis. Or a Plymouth Watkins Glen.

Mario Andretti, surprise, surprise, has been voted the outstanding performer in the second phase of the Martini & Rossi 1969 Driver of the Year competition. He was the unanimous choice of a panel of motorsports writers after breezing to his first Indy 500 victory. Andretti was 1967 Driver of the Year.

No. 2 man was Lee Roy Yarbrough, who was the winner of the first phase of the voting. Yarbrough won the World 600 at Charlotte, N. C. Others, in descending order, were Bruce McLaren (for his Can-Am win), Sam Posey (for the Lime Rock Trans-Am), Dan Gurney and Parnelli Jones.

The eventual winner gets $7,500 and a trophy.

Wheeling It

stock car fans who overslept on Monday and reached the local dealer after noon, were simply out of luck. There wasn't a Mercury Cyclone available in the South.

Then there is the business about car names. Pontiac was probably first on the grid in this respect when it began to affix racy-type names to some of its models. There's the Bonneville (salt flats), Grand Prix, LeMans and, lately, the Trans-Am (after the Trans-American Championship).

The names were chosen deliberately. The Trans-Am differs somewhat from the Bonneville, LeMans and Grand Prix names in that it was turned out to appeal specifically to racing fans.

Essentially a GTO, the car in its new incarnation received a rear-end spoiler, handling package, fat tires, racing stripes and a few other racing-oriented goodies. Curiously, General

Authority of Christian Church Questioned by Biblical Scholar

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Hugh Schonfield, the British biblical scholar who aroused a furore in 1965 by suggesting Christ's crucifixion was faked to fulfill Old Testament prophecies about the Messiah, is now questioning the whole authority of the Christian church.

His earlier book, "The Passover Plot," held that the events of Passion Week in Jerusalem were an organized conspiracy "of which the victim himself was the principal instigator." Now in "Those Incredible Christians" — published by Bantam Books in the United States April 1—he strikes a new blow at what he calls vested beliefs and ecclesiastical rubbish.

The new book is hardly likely to win him friends among orthodox churchmen. It may well bury him under fresh shoals of letters denouncing him roundly as "Satan's stooge."

But there's nothing particularly satanic-looking about the shy, 68-year-old Jewish scholar who has made his claims after more than 45 years of studying ancient texts.

Dr. Schonfield says he subscribes to no religious creed himself, though he believes in God as pure spirit. His books, he insists, are written in an honest search for truth and not to create sensation. What he seeks is approval from his fellow scholars.

Schonfield thinks his new book comes at a very decisive moment in Christian thinking.

"The whole position of the papacy and the Vatican, the very nature of all church authority, is being questioned today. At the same time there is this desire to get together, as exemplified in the ecumenical movement. But people are just not content to leave this whole matter to be treated on an academic level by theologians discussing fine points of ritual.

"The only way it is possible for people to get to grips with reality is if they are aware of how Christianity originated and what is its mandate. All this has been whittled away in the course of history and now suddenly, in this technological age, we are thrust against it head-on.

"The things that the church prizes are not the things that Jesus Christ stood for. I feel that only by studying the beginnings of the church can we put our finger on the vital thing which is really the matter—what the church has lost. It's on this that new thinking must be based. It's this that could be the new reformation."

Schonfield suggests in his new book that much of what the church has taught as doctrine through the centuries was the product of pressures or human ingenuity much later than the time of Jesus.

"The practice of forgery in the early church is well-attested," he writes. Paul mentioned it and the author of Revelation put a curse on anyone who added to or subtracted from what was in his book.

In fact, says Schonfield, the foundation of the Western church in Rome involved developing literary activity—"the clever construction of some documents, the editing of others, and the writing up of the story of Christian beginnings in the desired sense . . ."

The story is slanted, he claims.

And he goes on: "It is not the whole story or the true story. It omits almost everything which would suggest that the original chracter of Christianity was not in accord with what the church was now teaching. This is not to say that there was an instruction to falsify . . . (but) forgery assisted the formation of real convictions."

East European Nations Attack Religious Groups

VIENNA (AP) — Religion is still being attacked in all Communist states, but different lines are followed in the East European countries.

ALBANIA, Communist China's only ally in Europe, officially closed all places of worship last year. Travelers arriving here related they saw destroyed or damaged churches and mosques throughout the country, the Austrian Catholic news agency Kathpress has reported.

BULGARIA, a staunch follower of the Moscow line, constitutionally grants religious freedom, but in practice this amounts to a pretense of tolerance toward the Eastern Orthodox Church which strictly adheres to the political attitudes of the ruling Communist party. The Bulgarian Orthodox Church, like its Soviet sister, publicly approved the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia last August.

ROMANIA, which has repeatedly asserted the right of each Communist state to sovereignty, also has taken a stand of its own in matters of religion. Party chief and President Nicolae Ceausescu said last year, "We appreciate the contribution of the cults and their leaders to the building up of the new Romania."

The Patriarch of the Romanian church, Justinian Marina, openly condemned the invasion of Czechoslovakia barely three days after it took place.

HUNGARY recently reached an accord with the Vatican on the appointment of bishops, but the deadlock over Joszef Cardinal Mindszenty—who is still a political refugee at the U.S. Embassy in Budapest—still has not been overcome.

Several Hungarian churchmen have been arrested in the past years and some still are in prison. The mere fact of attending a church wedding nearly caused the expulsion of a Hungarian Communist from the party.

The Czechoslovak government has recently started secret talks with the Vatican, amid signs of improved church-state relations. As far back as 1965, the Czechoslovak authorities started releasing priests from prison, but they were not allowed to resume their clergical duties.

Both civilians and military men may become members of the French Legion of Honor for outstanding civil or military service.

SBA Ghetto Business Loans Like Playing With Loaded Dice

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sometimes James A. Gates Sr. wishes Black Capitalism never had come along.

He could drop in at the lodge or take in a ball game in the days when he eked out a living as an "alley mechanic" working out of a dilapidated garage. Now Gates doesn't have the time.

"The money made me more miserable than I was," said the round-faced Gates, 40, as he sat behind his desk in the bright and modern service station he operates in the St. Louis, Mo., ghetto.

"To be truthful, if I got the $15,000 I asked for I could have gotten things going."

Gates got half that and is now 15 months behind in his payments to the lender, the Small Business Administration.

Gates feels hounded, harassed and misunderstood and is painfully aware that the wolf of liquidation bays at his door.

Gates is one of the thousands of Negroes trying with federal government help to crack through the barriers of custom and prejudice into the largely white world of small business.

Most are making it. Many, like Gates, are not.

In the fiscal year that ended Monday, the SBA upped its National minority loan total from 1,500 to more than 4,000.

Officials say a failure rate of 15 to 20 per cent should be anticipated. The failure rate for standard SBA loans is 2.9 per cent.

"We're shooting dice with a lot of these loans and we've got to do it," said Philip Pruitt, an assistant SBA administrator in Washington in charge of the minority program.

Locating in the ghetto is a gamble from the start. The beginning merchant depends for his sales on people at the bottom of the economic rung. Shudders in the economy affect the ghetto first. A mild recession can spell ruin for a merchant whose profits in a fledgling business can be marginal even in good times.

And riots can be as calamitous for the black storekeeper as for the white.

The beginning Negro businessman faces a cultural problem, too. Relatively rare is the Negro with a businessman in his family. The methods of the marketplace, which many whites absorb naturally while growing up, are often foreign to him.

To learn, he needs a teacher. Those who can teach are in short supply.

The Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) is the volunteer organization the SBA has traditionally used to help beginners. But virtually all SCORE's 3,200 members are white. Pruitt said many are afraid to visit the ghetto. The SCORE program is almost neutralized there as a result.

And if confidence breeds confidence, a lack of it can undermine the inexperienced man out to prove he can succeed.

"Attitudes in some of the agencies have got to be changed," said Pruitt, himself a Negro. "We have to turn around the attitudes of some of the white regional directors and loan officers."

Another problem is personnel. The SBA is so short in specialists on minority loan problems that it can field minority teams in just 28 cities.

One of these is St. Louis, a city of 675,000 people. Almost 300,000 of them are Negroes.

"I have never been able to understand why there aren't more Negroes in business in St. Louis," said John P. Pfeffer, St. Louis regional director.

Pfeffer's office made 26 minority loans in fiscal 1968. Its goal for fiscal 1969 was 106. With a week to go in the fiscal year, its total stood at 42.

Pfeffer said he wants to see his office make more loans. But first, he said, there must be "some reasonable probability of success."

Pfeffer, 65, was a lawyer and real estate man before joining the SBA in 1961. He has the final word in St. Louis on whether a loan is approved or rejected, and if approved, for what amount. The amount can be as vexing a question as whether to risk the loan in the first place.

"It was just enough to get a man in trouble" is a frequent complaint.

"In many cases, it's been true," said Pruitt, a former Wall Street investment banker.

Pfeffer said the complaint certainly isn't valid in the case of Gates, who maintained that the SBA put him in arrears from the start.

The problem is Gates' case, said Pfeffer was not so much money as attitude.

"How in the world would money have helped him?" asked Pfeffer. "Additional working capital, as he'd like to call it, would have gotten him nothing.

"We have never convinced Gates that operating a gas station is a long, arduous task."

Pfeffer said Gates spurned advice on housekeeping and allowed parking on station property despite the discouraging impact a small sea of cars had on would-be customers. Gates said the parkers were friends, who would be offended if chased away, and who patronized the station.

"It's just like punching a mattress," Pfeffer said. "There's no response."

Pfeffer said the only thing that has worked with Gates is a get-tough policy. "He doesn't think you mean it unless you crack his skull or cut his throat or something. So we put the thing in liquidation and miraculously, the guy gave us a payment.

Milton V. (Buddy) Lonesome, a former newspaperman and disc jockey, said he referred 410 loan applicants to the SBA in the 2½ years he directed the St. Louis Small Business Development Corp.

The SBA approved 72 loans. The total should have been at least 300 higher, Lonesome insists—"The SBA has been something else, man."

"All he (Lonesome) does is cry," said Pfeffer. "He'll bring in a one-legged guy who wants to open a momma and poppa store on the corner where four other guys have gone broke ... We can give him $5,000, watch him go broke and convince him and the community he can't make it."

"I brought him the people from the ghetto," said Lonesome. "He can give them any ridiculous name he wants.

"These are the people from the ghetto and this is the way they live. Good, grade A clients don't need help."

But, asked Pfeffer: "Aren't we doing greater damage if we put a guy in business and let him fall on his face than we would do if we didn't let him go into business in the first place?

Gates, the burly me chanic, sat back behind his desk after leading visitors on a tour of his station, rich in the latest devices for tracking down engine trouble.

Gates was a long way from the old garage on North Garrison.

"I'll never, never go back," he said. "I'll stand on a corner and sell shoelaces before I go back."

A Way to Avoid Air

Whole Working Day Can Go By—All Underground

By JOE WING

NEW YORK (AP) I went underground today, as I do about 250 days in the year.

Most New Yorkers who travel to work on the subway spend a lot of their lives underground. Without half trying, I can put in a whole working day, and the night too if so minded, without exposing myself to the rigor's of Manhattan's climate.

Riding a train under the East River I step out on a platform about 40 feet below street level and, for all I know, not much above sea level.

So I climb the stairs to the cavernous station and join the ever-moving procession toward Seventh Avenue. Of course I could reverse my field and go to the Eighth Avenue subway line or even to Madison Square Garden.

But I settle into my usual groove—all of us here have our private grooves of greater or lesser depth—and, still underground, cross beneath the Seventh Avenue line and enter the block long, dingy passage leading to Sixth Avenue.

You don't fight the crowd, you move with it. You don't scan oncoming faces or try to remember them but dwell on your own inward thoughts. You just clump along for awhile, descend more stairs, and push into the F Train or D Train as one or the other pauses to spew out workers from Brooklyn.

The subway car sways and roars, the doors close and open twice and you are at Rockefeller Center, a mile uptown.

All this time you might have eaten, drunk, banked, sent telegrams or placed market orders while underground. You could have shopped for luggage, candy, clothes, shoes, birds, jewels, hardware, books, oriental treasures, drugs, records, cigars, novelties or filing cabinets underground. You might have been barbered, shoeshined, photographed or dry cleaned underground. And that would have been just a starter.

Now that you are in Rockefeller Center itself, the possibilities are limitless. Long, shining, showcased passages shoot out from the center to a dozen nearby buildings, and an interlocking maze of subway lines can carry you all over Manhattan, Queens, Brooklyn and the Bronx without once endangering you with the ravages of fresh air.

Not needing to travel far, I take an escalator and then an elevator to the sixth floor of The Associated Press Building and start my working day with my back to a curtained window. Late in the afternoon, if my wife happens to call, I'm glad. She can tell me what the weather's like out there.

Junk Man's Fortune A Surprise

LONDON (AP) — Junk man Eddie Mitchell was cleaning out an empty shop basement when he discovered 25 paintings in a suitcase wrapped in an old blue bedspread. First he wanted to burn them; then he unsuccessfully tried to sell them for $1 apiece.

Finally he took one to an art shop "to see if it was worth anything."

It was one of Picasso's best known works, "Weeping Woman," worth an estimated $200,000. Besides five other Picasso's there were others by Marc Chagall, Georges Braque, Max Ernst and Miro. The 25 paintings were worth $720,000.

Mitchell, 30, told how he and a fellow worker, Aubrey Worman, found the paintings while clearing rubbish from an old building in a West London suburb Tuesday.

"We thought they were rubbish and my mate Aub said: 'Throw them out, they're no good.' I handed the suitcase to Aub and said: 'Throw them on the pile with the rest of the rubbish.'

"Aub said: 'Let's try to flog (sell) them.' We took four paintings across the road to a shop and said to one of the blokes: 'Give us a dollar for each of them and they're yours.' He said 'Get lost.'"

Eventually Mitchell took the Picasso to an art shop. Marcus Taylor, 41, a photographer whose wife runs the shop, had it verified. Mitchell told him there were others and Taylor went to look at them. Both decided to call Scotland Yard.

Detectives identified the paintings as those stolen last April from the home of Sir Roland Penrose, one of Britain's leading art collectors.

Mitchell and "Aub" are eligible for a $72,000 reward Penrose offered for return of the paintings.

Call Ambassador Home From Aden

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany announced Wednesday it is recalling its ambassador to Aden in response to South Yemen's recognition of Communist-ruled East Germany, but added that diplomatic relations have not been formally broken.

Government spokesman Conrad Ahlers told a news conference that a formal break with Aden "is not justified by German interests in South Yemen."

The freeze in relations follows a pattern set last month, when the Bonn government shut down its mission in Phnom Penh.

Language Worries Film Makers

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — NEA) — Sometimes it may not look as though movie makers worried about the language used in today's films. But they do.

Exhibit A is "Rabbit, Run," currently being shot at Warner Bros.-Seven Arts studio, with Jack Smight directing and Howard Kreitsek the writer and producer.

James Caan and Anjanette Comer were shooting a cover scene. It had already been filmed once, but both Kreitsek and Smight felt, on third thought, that perhaps the movie code authorities might object to one line.

You'd probably object to it, too, so I won't write it. But I'll tell you the two lines they gave Anjanette to say in its place. She was telling Jimmy off, commenting acidly about the way men in general and he in particular took love so lightly.

"Bing bang and it's all over," was the way she said it.

And then, just to be doubly safe, they shot it a third time. In this take, Anjanette said, "Wham bam and it's all over."

"When you see "Rabbit, Run," it will be interesting to note which line was used — the original line, or the "bing bang" line or the "wham bam" line.

"We have to see which one the code O.K.s," Smight said. "We don't want an X on this picture."

Between set-ups, Caan played Scrabble — "Is there a word 'ra'?" — with the wardrobe girl. Sometimes he shoots baskets. They put a basketball backboard and hoop against one wall for him. Sometimes he practices his roping. They wheeled in a steer head for him to throw at.

He's a relaxed cat, and there is obviously a nice rapport between him and Smight. They conversed, occasionally, in Laurel-and-Hardy—Smight did the Oliver Hardy voice and Caan was Stan Laurel. He also did a Burton imitation once.

When Anjanette was applying eye shadow, he said, "Hurry up, gal. I'm due at my psychiatrist's at two."

Anjanette, she of the exquisitely sad face and cheerful figure, didn't indulge in any of the badinage. She's a serious girl, serious about life and more serious about acting.

She waited a year and a half for this part. It is, she says, the best thing she has had. She categorizes everything else she's done — except "The Loved Ones," which was, she says, "special" — as "junk," only she used a stronger word.

"I worked with good people—Steiger, Quinn, Brando," she says, "but the pictures were bad. So I waited for this because I—AM—A VERY—GOOD—ACTRESS."

One of the most fascinating aspects of "Rabbit, Run," is the story of Kreitsek, the producer-writer. He used to be a big real estate developer around New York. Then he broke his leg badly and was in a cast for 26 months.

He decided he had been a hypocrite toward himself, in that he really wanted to do something creative. While convalescing, he read John Updike's novel, "Rabbit, Run." He loved it and thought it would make a great movie.

Years later, he got into movie-making accidentally, by writing a screenplay based on Ray Bradbury's "The Illustrated Man" to test an animated film process he had acquired. He met Jack Smight and they teamed up to do "The Illustrated Man." And Smight told him he owned "Rabbit, Run," so here they are.

Kreitsek says producing movies isn't much different from producing housing developments. Both involve you in lots of details. If you can handle the one, he says, you can handle the other.

Words of Advice

Director Jack Smight, his arm around Anjanette Comer, seems to be telling James Caan to get out, but he's merely discussing an up-coming scene with the two stars of "Rabbit, Run." Howard Kreitsek, left, is producing the film, which is based on John Updike's best-selling novel. (NEA)

TONY WINNER INTO MOVIE

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Great White Hope," winner of the Tony Awards as best dramatic play of the season and for best dramatic actor, James Earl Jones, will be made into a movie. Jones will recreate the role for the film, which will be written for the screen by the play's author, Harold Sackler.

Lawrence Turman will produce and Martin Ritt will direct the film version of the story, based on the career of heavyweight boxing champion Jack Johnson.

IT PAYED TO FIDDLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Another 20 per cent profit has been returned to investors in the hit Broadway musical, "Fiddler on the Roof." Investors have received a total 695 per cent profits on their $375,000 investment. A total of $5,212,500 has been shared equally by investors and producer Harold Prince.

Disneyland East Getting Best of Disneyland West

By JOAN CROSBY
NEA Entertainment Editor

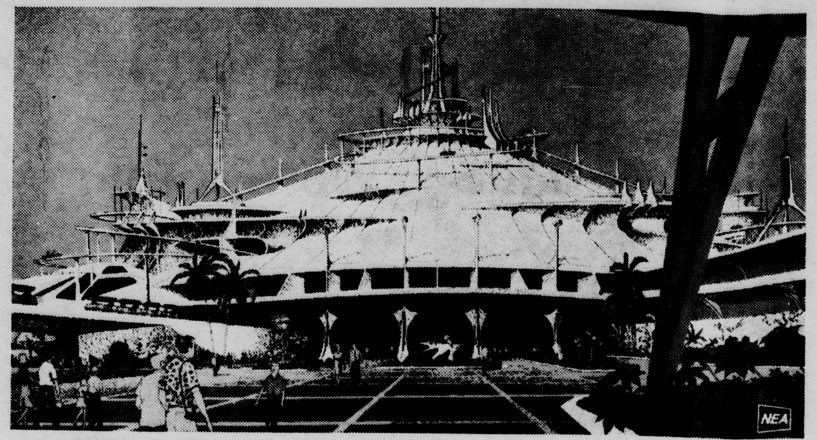

ORLANDO, Fla.—(NEA)—The Mickey Mouse balloon bobbed jauntily against a very blue, cloudless sky reigning, at the moment, over acres of bulldozed, bare land.

Balloons are the major decoration at Walt Disney World, marking off the sites of various buildings in this multi-million dollar complex which will consist of a Disneyland-type amusement park, a complete vacation-resort facility and, ultimately, a prototype city of tomorrow.

The first phase of this project, the Magic Kingdom amusement park and two theme hotels, one contemporary and one Polynesian, will open in October, 1971.

"It's a $50 million commitment and we've got the money to open this place," Roy Disney, chairman of the Board of Walt Disney Productions, said.

That's just for openers, however. It is estimated that $165 million dollars will be invested in the area. By the time the facility is completed, the total investment of Disney and other corporations will exceed $300 million dollars.

AN ARTIST'S CONCEPT of the 20-story Space Mountain which will be a feature attraction at Disneyland East.

The first year of operation will require 5,500 employes and there will be an annual payroll of $20 million.

Audience research disclosed that there are vast numbers of people along the eastern seaboard and the middle-Atlantic states who will probably never get to California to visit Disneyland. So Disneyland, renamed Walt Disney World, will come to visit them.

It's a major event for the state of Florida.

It's also a major event for the U.S. Steel Company, which is constructing the hotels, all built around themes: Polynesian, Asian (with architecture strongly influenced by Thailand), Venetian (with canals and gondolas), Persian and Contemporary.

The Polynesian and the Contemporary, the first two to be opened, will use modular frame construction and the rooms will be completely furnished as they are lifted into place.

An innovation which would affect everyone's future will be used in the Magic Kingdom: underground pneumatic chutes to remove the garbage.

The lake will have miles of sandy beaches. The lake is now being dredged and drained. It will be totally cleaned, have fresh water pumped in, be rimmed with the sand and, voila, instant sun bathing.

The Magic Kingdom will be like Disneyland with Frontierland, Adventureland, Fantasyland and Tomorrowland. Rides will be similar and so will some of the attractions featuring the audioanimatronic figures the Disney "imagineers" developed.

It's months from reality, but there is something about the site, and the Mickey Mouse balloon, and the tree nursery which will provide the area's landscaping that makes some words of Roy Disney ring very true.

"Walt and his staff could reach out and touch the hearts of the people," Roy said. "It was Walt's real strength."

ROCK OPERA FROM SHAKESPEARE

NEW YORK (AP) — Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida" will be adapted into a rock opera, according to Joseph Papp, founder-producer of the New York Shakespeare Festival. Papp will collaborate on the production with Galt MacDermot, composer of the rock music for the Broadway hit, "Hair."

Papp, author of the libretto, will present "Cressida" next season for eight weeks at the nonprofit Public Theater, the festival's downtown base.

IN A SHUBERT THEATER?

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Brothers Shubert," Jerry Staff's biographical study of the famous theater family, has been purchased by Edward Padula for a Broadway musical. Padula, who produced the musicals, "Bye, Bye Birdie," "Bajour" and "All American," will call the stage version "Shubert Alley."

NY CITY OPERA TO LA

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York City Opera will make its third visit to Los Angeles in November, to present 16 performances of eight operas at the Music Center Pavilion.

The Los Angeles season will follow the company's fall season in New York, Sept. 10-Nov. 16.

Operas to be presented in Los Angeles are "Mefistofele," "Lucia de Lammermoor," "Prince Igor," "Rigoletto," "Manon," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Il Trittico" and "The Ballad of Baby Doe."

Patron Helpful to Actor

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — A suggestion for all you millionaires out there — be a patron, adopt an actor and nurture him.

"An actor needs a patron to get along these days," says Leslie Nielsen. He has one, although his isn't a millionaire. Nielsen's patron is something better — a producer. His name is Jack Laird.

Nielsen says that Laird has used him in many of his films and television shows. One of these will be this coming season, when Laird does The Protectors and Nielsen will be one of the stars.

The Canadian actor's thesis is that there are so many good actors around today that they can get lost in the crowd — unless there is a patron around to help them over the rough spots.

"Many good actors don't get recognition," he says, "and some get recognition who don't deserve it. It's like somebody going to an art gallery and ignoring the Rembrandts and Van Goghs to watch a kid with a hula hoop. It's often the flashy actors who make it — but not for long.

"We had the Year of Burton and Taylor, but they don't mean so much any more."

———

Jane Kean is off to do "Mame" in Chicago and "Guys and Dolls" in St. Louis, and then it's back to Miami for another season of the Jackie Gleason Show.

For Jane, the work with Gleason is great, but she can't say the same for Miami. She finds that part of the world dull and, as soon as her weekly stint is done, she heads back here or to her New York apartment.

"There are so man old people in Miami," she says. "There's a story there — I don't know if it's true or not — that the big hospitals in Miami closed down their maternity wards. Nobody in Florida is young enough to get pregnant."

Jane says that the public, by and large, has the wrong idea about actors. Once, appearing in Toronto, she met some people and they invited her to join them after her act. They went to a discotheque — "discotheques are the same everywhere," Jane says — but her new friends had advanced ideas.

"We want you to feel at home," they whispered. "We know a place where you can get pot."

She politely declined.

At 26, Johnny Rivers is considering the alternatives.

He has a few offers from big companies to buy him out — for several million dollars.

Or he can stay where he is and make the millions more slowly.

"I just kind of fell into all this," he says. It all began about two years ago, when the sock singer started his own music publishing, producing and recording firms — Soul City Records. They clicked, mostly because he signed The Fifth Dimension as recording artists.

For several reasons, Rivers is seriously considering the offers to buy him out. As things are, he's pretty much chained to his desk — he's only doing a concert or two a month — and he would prefer performing more.

And he also wants to find out about life. Up until now, he has been too busy working for that.

"I want to travel," he says. "I want to experiment with living. Too many people only know how to earn money, but not how to enjoy it.

"I'm lucky. I've made it while I'm still young enough to learn how to enjoy it."

Raquel Welch–Can She Succeed Where Other Sex Symbols Failed?

Ask Them Yourself

FOR ROBERT C. SEAMANS, JR., Secretary of the Air Force

How often is Air Force One replaced?—B. V. Eldridge, Rochester, N.Y.

● Air Force One is a designation reserved for any Air Force aircraft when the President is aboard. The aircraft most often used by the President was purchased in 1962 and has been assigned to the Military Aircraft Command's special missions wing at Andrews Air Force Base, located near Washington, D.C.

FOR HELEN ROSE, designer

What is the biggest peeve you have with the ladies for whom you design clothes?—Verda Ross, San Bernardino, Calif.

● The youth kick. Women should always look young, but there are ways of doing it without looking kooky. For example, few women over 35 can wear their hair long and fluffy without looking like the movie stars of the '20s. Also a woman of 50 whose hemline is six inches above the knee looks most unattractive. Let us leave the minis, long hair, and see-throughs for the very young—they belong together.

FOR JULIAN GOODMAN, President, NBC

● The NBC Peacock was created in the company's advertising department. John Graham is director of design.

FOR LEO DUROCHER

Has your view that "nice guys finish last" changed? —Mrs. Helene Walker, Cando, N.D.

● I have said many times that I never said this. I was asked about another team in the league and said, "They are a bunch of nice guys, but they are going to finish last." This is quite different from the quote.

FOR MRS. LYNDON B. JOHNSON

Is it true that you refuse to allow public parks to be named after you? If so, why is Columbus Island (Texas) to be known as "Lady Bird Johnson Park?"—Mrs. H. A. Winters, Gainesville, Ga.

● It is true that I have asked that buildings and sites not be named after me, but Columbus Island was renamed in my honor as a surprise.

FOR RANDOLPH W. THROWER, Commissioner, Internal Revenue Service

Which form brings in the most revenue—taxpayers' Form 1040 or 1040A, or the corporate form?—Mrs. Art Rohr, Devil's Lake, N.D.

● During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1968, the IRS collected almost $154 billion in income, employment, excise, estate, and gift taxes. More than half of the total revenue collected ($78.1 billion) came from Forms 1040 or 1040A.

FOR JOE GARAGIOLA, NBC sportscaster

Is the House of David semi-pro baseball team still in existence anywhere?—Conrad Fiorello, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● It is possible that there is a "splinter team," but I don't know of any House of David team any more.

FOR LT. GEN. LEWIS B. HERSHEY, Director, Selective Service

Can any branch of service other than the Army draft men?—Walter Kendrick, Dallas, N.C.

● Currently only the Army and Marine Corps are depending upon the Selective Service System for their additional manpower. However, the manpower provided by Selective Service is available to the other service branches should the need arise at anytime.

FOR ELIZABETH POST, etiquette authority

If her husband is introduced as president of an organization at a dinner, should the wife applaud along with the guests?—D.G., Boise, Idaho

● Yes, indeed. She is the happiest and proudest of all the guests, and she should join in showing her approval.

FOR ED SULLIVAN

Do you personally select the actors and other entertainers who appear on the "Ed Sullivan Show"? —Ronald E. Wiand, Huron, S.D.

● All of us take part in the selection. For European acts, we are guided by the recommendations of those actors who have worked with them in their foreign dates. After the Saturday rehearsal, when I've seen the act, I edit their material down to four to six minutes, based on the reaction of our matinee audience.

Want to ask a famous person a question? You can through this column, and we'll get the answer from the prominent person you designate. Send question, preferably on a post card, to Ask Them Yourself, Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We cannot acknowledge questions, but $5 will be paid for each one used.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Auto Tape Tours Vacationers headed for a national park this summer may add a new dimension to their enjoyment. At Glacier, Great Smoky Mountain, and Rocky Mountain National Parks and Canada's Banff and Jasper National Parks, they may rent a tape recorder with a cassette which tells it like it is, like it was (history and legends), and like it will be ("use your second gear for the next ascent"). The motorist plugs the portable into his auto's cigarette lighter and drives at recommended speeds, so the taped travelog will correspond to the passing scene. Mood music plays during the dull stretches.

Bennington Fair When Mrs. Carolyn Kriegman, a housewife from East Orange, N.J., went on a Caribbean cruise, she met a dentist whose hobby was designing one-of-a-kind jewelry, using extra gold from his office. Back at her home-town library, Mrs. Kriegman began boning up on crafting jewelry. Her first pieces were made with a soldering iron heated on her kitchen stove and plastics heated in her oven. Her first art-work showing was in that public library. This weekend, several awards and one-woman shows later, she is exhibiting at the Creative Craft Fair 4, in Bennington, Vt.

Try, Try Again When Betty Beaird (in NBC-tv's "Julia") couldn't crash Broadway, she began her "Plan B." This University of Texas graduate told us, "I got into NBC as a file clerk and began bugging them for a better job, but I had to learn shorthand." So she did and also took several technical tv courses at Columbia. "I worked very hard; I wanted to impress them." So did all that hard work pay off with the role in "Julia"? "No!" admitted Betty, "It was just a case of luck—being in the right place at the right time."

Detour to Success Do you feel stuck in your job? Move! Forty-three percent of new corporation presidents have been with the company only five years or less; 22 percent were hired from outside, according to an R. M. Schmitz survey reported by "Nation's Business." It found: "increasingly companies are not able to grow their own executives." Bad news for companies, good for maverick employees.

Ante Up While local governments are hard-put in funding, and prospective homeowners need mortgage money, the gamblers have never had it so good. One of Las Vegas' most luxurious casinos, Caesar's Palace, has raised its gambling limits to the highest in the world: top bet for dice and blackjack has been doubled from $500 to $1,000; baccarat from $2,000 to $4,000.

Andy Kim

Calling All Gals Singer Andy Kim ("Tricia, Tell Your Daddy"), 22, is anxious to get married, having come from a close-knit Lebanese family. "I don't believe in long engagements," Andy stated. How short? "As soon as I tell myself I'm in love with someone I would give my life for. And she has got to love me more than she loves herself. Right now, I really love only six people: my brothers, mother, father—and, of course, me."

Today's Youth Isn't

A chronicler of their worship of the ugly

THE FACT that morality can take on different aspects as the fashions change might indicate that it has no basic essence, is as frivolous as the mode of the day, and inconstant as the wind or weather.

However, from the time human motives were first analyzed in the ancient classics and the Bible or used as plot material by authors all the way from Chaucer to Truman Capote, there have been no actual changes in the concept of right and wrong. If there had been, nobody today would be able to understand, much less find an identification with such characters as Ulysses, Job, the wife of Bath, or Holly Golightly. The ingredients that make up the human psyche can no more be altered than bread can be made without flour.

For some time now, a quirk that originated in the morbid brain of old Doctor Freud in Vienna has been in style: that the human spirit is devoid of nobility.

This accusation of mass guilt has so crippled our moral aims that we take sides with criminals against their victims; make no move to reject the creepy exhibitionism of such show-offs as Joan Baez and Yoko Ono and her husband Beatle John Lennon or the pretenses of Marshall MacLuhan, who claims our identities are at the mercy of our tv sets.

And fashion in dress, which is always inclined to lay itself open to the ridiculous, has now allowed itself to be taken over by the teen-ager, possibly through the sheer nuisance value of his bad behavior. Or, largely, I would say, because the cult of Freud has enfeebled the moral stamina of grownups through its illusion of guilt.

But youth adores to be chastized; no catharsis for its turbulent emotions is half so gratifying as punishment. And the thing it most resents is having its defects ignored.

So in a spirit of revenge over the moral laziness of its elders, youth has taken advantage of several brand-new ways to be naughty; replaced its old-fashioned vogue for bubble gum and Tootsie Rolls with marijuana and LSD. The most potent of all its revenges and the most far-reaching, however, is youth's deliberate choice of ugliness as an ideal.

I am ready to grant that, in some ways, this new Cult of Ugliness shows more consideration for humanity at large than when it was thought desirable for boys to be attractive and girls to be very pretty.

It is all too true that the great majority of the human race suffers facial defects and inferior anatomy, which it is now encouraged to flaunt in a manner that used to be the rare privilege of the beautiful. Then, too, when young people combed their hair and were neat, they had a tendency to look alike and thus melt into the background.

But dirt and dishevelment can be extended into an infinite variety of eyesores. In addition, matted hair and grubby clothing can be achieved without effort; it only requires that one carefully avoid soap, water, and the hairbrush.

But far beyond the shock value of squalid clothing is the present-day vogue of wearing no clothes at all. Nudity is not only beyond compare as an attention-getter and booster for the ego, but the more one's proportions lack symmetry, the more arresting. And to cap all its other advantages, nudity is as cheap as it is invincible.

It is only normal for grownups to want to look young, with the result that, in copying the teen-ager, they, too, have embraced its Cult of Ugliness; ladies of erstwhile dignity uncover knees that are bulgy from years of too little exercise; women with well-preserved bodies assume the sleaziness of bell-bottom pants, which give them the proportions of Popeye the Sailor Man. And dress designers in Paris, London, New York, and particularly Hollywood have followed along with the trend.

Designers of taste have either held their ground against the deluge, as did Mademoiselle Chanel or, as in the case of Balenciaga, retired permanently from the fashion scene and turned their profession over to the untidy. The teen-ager has triumphed. The immature mind has hit the fashion target right on the button.

So widespread is this worship of the malformed that it has invaded every phase of modern aesthetics. In painting, it has reached its apotheosis in the pictures of Willem de Kooning, whose misshapen females

yesterday's "wild youth" takes to task its children, and the arrogance of their moral pretenses

By ANITA LOOS

Author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "But Marry Brunettes," and "A Girl Like I" could have stepped right out of the nightmares of old Doctor Freud himself after partaking of too many kartoffel pfannkuchen. The same disaster has happened to literature and to films, in which writers like Philip Roth have uncovered whole new areas of nausea.

In the light of this trend, it might even seem that, for present-day concepts, a new version of Cinderella may be required.

Let us suppose, then, that the time-honored fairy tale were made into a feature film which could measure up to modern standards. Its title role would be played by Barbra Streisand, who would be the victim of an insane jealousy on the part of her two stepsisters, played by Zsa Zsa Gabor and Mamie Van Doren.

To avenge their maniacal envy of Barbra's looks, Mamie and Zsa Zsa would force her to comb her hair and put on a dress of classical design, executed by Mainbocher.

But then, during a low point of Barbra's despair, there suddenly appears before her a Good Fairy, played by Phyllis Diller. Phyllis provides Barbra with a fright wig, strips her of clothing, and rolls her in cinders. After which, she takes Barbra down to a happening in the East Village pad of the hero, Dustin Hoffman, complete with a cigar and a chronic drug habit.

There, to the racket of a jazz combo, Barbra meets Dustin and love conquers all. Mamie and Zsa Zsa, hiding their symmetrical noses in chagrin, are forced to make-do with a couple of rejects, played by Horst Buchholz and Gunther Gebel-Williams, while Barbra and Dustin live happily for several weeks thereafter, in sin.

I hesitate, however, before offering this rewrite of the old fairy tale to be made into a film by Andy Warhol. For I am beginning to see evidence that this youthful preference for the unsightly harbors certain signs of a retreat; that we may possibly be in for a return to the aesthetic scruples of the past.

For young people, like most exhibitionists, protest too loudly; they make one feel that their worship of the slip-shod is basically weak. I can cite the excellent Zefferelli film of "Romeo and Juliet," in which the two young lovers are of such pure beauty and harmonious proportions that one can't imagine them being acceptable to children of an era which has embraced Barbra and Dustin as its archetypes of perfection.

And yet at every performance of this film, long lines of boys and girls, with their hair like birds' nests and garments assembled from debris, wait patiently not only to gaze on peerless beauty but to listen to the dialogue of Shakespeare. And when at the end of the film the lovers are parted by death, an audible sob shakes the theater almost to its foundations. A manifestation such as this gives one courage to hope that perhaps Tiny Tim himself, if given the choice, would like to look like Monica Vitti.

And I am also beginning to wonder about this youthful rebellion against the Establishment; is there perhaps a note of the same hypocrisy for which they themselves damn the old social order?

Students who knock down the college walls in their demonstrations against a) war, b) race discrimination, or c) the inadequacy of present-day instruction can be just as destructive as war itself. Discrimination against their own parents can be much more violent than discrimination against any race, cult, or creed.

Let youth damn our hypocrisy as it may, I have never been able to condemn it. It has always seemed to me a sort of good manners of the spirit. We are assured by the Bible that nobody is perfect; but when we put on the outer trappings of perfection and try to ape a certain purity of heart, it shows that we are not in agreement with our imperfections. In other words, we try.

A couple of decades ago in Hollywood, I beheld a most gratifying manifestation of hypocrisy. It was centered in the person of Amy Semple MacPherson, who was High Priestess of her own Temple of the Four Square Gospel. As glamorous as any movie star, Amy achieved her good looks by the same means as Mae West—pancake make-up.

Amy would, in fact, have been a star of stage and screen, except that unfortunately she was born with ankles that were thick to a degree which made it expedient for them to be camouflaged. Ergo—the best cover-up for faulty ankles is . . . what? Why, the long robes of the church!

And Amy, standing before her altar in a gown of shimmering white, backed up by an aura of neon lights and a mass of plastic lilies; leading her choir in her own religious lyrics for a pop song of the period, "I Don't Want to Walk Without You, Baby," produced a religious exaltation I have never known to be exceeded.

A congregation of thousands who wouldn't have held still for a moment to hear Bach's Mass in B Minor, stood up and held hands clear across the auditorium in a unified manifestation of pious joy.

I think life would be more sane and certainly less guilt-ridden if present-day humanity were required to wash their mouths out with soap and practice a little good, old-fashioned, mid-Victorian hypocrisy. ◆

Coming—A New Kind of Doctor for the Entire Family

By MAYNARD I. SHAPIRO, M.D. as told to Terry Schaertel

President, American Academy of General Practice

ONE FAMILY doctor to care for 3,000 patients! Sounds like a newly developing country! But with the increasing shortage of general medical practitioners, this is the alarming ratio right here in America!

In 1968 only about 14 percent of all those wanting to become doctors chose to go into the much-needed practice of general medicine. The number of general practitioners has been declining about 1.7 percent a year since World War II.

This shortage poses a danger to your family's health care. Hopefully, however, it soon will be remedied. This year, for the first time, graduating medical students will enter residencies designed to prepare them for the newly created specialty called Family Practice (F.P.).

The American Academy of General Practice has fought four years to create this 20th primary specialty of organized medicine. It is the first step toward achieving the goal of enough family-oriented doctors to care for every member of every family in every city and town.

A family physician is the first-contact doctor who accepts full responsibility for health care and medical needs of the entire family.

How will the new FP be different from today's GP? He will have had much broader initial training, providing him with greater knowledge and experience. In addition to internal medicine, pediatrics, psychiatry, obstetrics, gynecology, and surgery, the family doctor also will have been trained in the behavioral sciences for the first time.

Psychology, sociology, cultural anthropology, and economics are included in the new doctor's academic training. For example, the study of obstetrics includes not only the biological but also the psychological impact of pregnancy, delivery, and care of the newborn upon a woman and her family. Marriage counseling, family relationships, and a study of human sexuality are part of the new curriculum, too. Finally, unlike any other specialty, the FP will have to be recertified every six years.

The family practitioner will know health and personal problems of entire families.

The new FP is being trained to understand the emotional and family strain present in both health and disease. He will be better equipped to get to the heart of the patient's problem. This kind of training should enable the family doctor to handle many emotional problems, perhaps preventing future psychiatric disorders. He should also be able to establish an atmosphere of mutual concern between himself and the patient. The family doctor will have a "bedside manner," which is also very important.

I have seen, for instance, a hospitalized patient terrified because a surgeon just matter-of-factly confirmed his operation appointment for the next morning. The surgeon may be the best, but if he doesn't consider emotional needs, the patient may have an anxiety reaction.

The FP will have clear explanations and should understand the patient's fears, restoring peace of mind.

The new FP will know the patient's background and his family's health history plus any personal problems. I know of a case in which a man had ulcer symptoms. Yet even X rays were never able to confirm the ulcer diagnosis. The patient, however, was a meticulous man, a perfectionist married to a sloppy housekeeper—that was the real problem. While a limited specialist probably wouldn't know this family background, an FP would. The FP would treat the problem with as much psychology as medicine and would involve both husband and wife.

Some people have been known to say that they never have been sick a day in their lives, don't have a family doctor, and don't need one. But if they ever do become ill, they have two choices: go to a hospital emergency ward, an experience often clinically unsatisfactory or diagnose themselves initially and attempt to select the proper specialist. For example, a pain in the chest—is it a heart pain? Does it come from the lungs? A person could see many specialists before learning the truth.

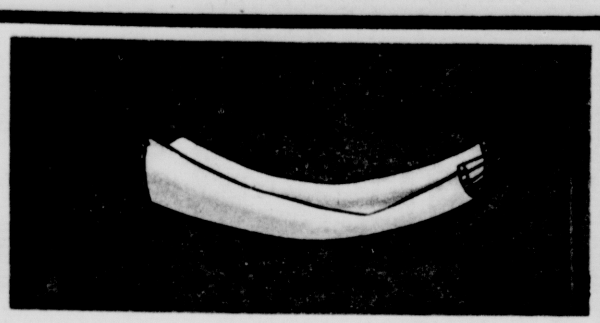

I had a desperate patient come to me after being "sick" for eight months. Her complaint was a constant neck pain and a tendency to hold her head far to one side. She'd seen an internist, orthopedist, osteopath, and chiropractor.

We were able to treat this woman only after she talked to us about her home environment. She worked as a telephone operator and, up to that point, the job had been blamed as the source of her problem—specifically, the headset she wore. Our interview, however, discovered her husband was seriously ill. Her concern for him was manifesting itself in physical pain in her neck—another example that a person is more than a group of organs and systems but rather a total human entity.

When will we begin to notice the benefits of this new specialty? Within five years we expect to see a 30-percent gain in the number of doctors practicing family medicine. In about nine years, families moving into a new community should have less difficulty finding a doctor who can treat the entire family. The small towns which have had to go without a doctor for years will have a greater pool of highly trained young doctors to choose from.

The public has a right to expect from all its doctors the highest degree of technical ability and the latest advances in medical science. The new Family Practice will give the public that expertise. ◆

RAQUEL WELCH

Can a Sexpot Become an Actress?

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

Harlow, Turner, Monroe—they wanted to display their dramatic talents instead of their figures; so does this beauty, and she may succeed where they failed

"WE HAVE an actress in the audience," was the announcement from the stage of a Las Vegas club.

Not unusual to hear where celebrities circulate, but coming from Ann-Margret, it was said with emphatic sarcasm as she pointed to sex-symbol Raquel Welch. A feud between the two has been going on since.

In Rome recently, Raquel whipped a water pistol out of her purse and stopped the provocative glances of an admirer with a squirt right between the eyes.

Because she's always wanted to be a full-fledged actress. Until now, only Raquel and her husband-business partner had any faith in her acting ability. In fact, when he was only her manager, Patrick Curtis did everything possible to avoid the typical build-up based on gossip, nude layouts, and bikini-clad photos.

He never even discussed this ex-model's previous marriage and two children, always emphasizing only her professional life. All this concerted effort did not succeed because of a series of mediocre but commercially successful pictures that emphasized Raquel's 36-22½-35½ figure.

A few months ago, Raquel finally decided that she had had it with the sex image, on screen and off. "I want to be flexible," she said. "I would like to do many roles, including drama and comedy. I want to move on."

She kept turning down scores of scripts that called for her to disrobe. When producer Leon Fromkess sent her the script of "Flareup," she said she would accept the part only if her role was changed from a topless go-go dancer to a covered-up one.

Raquel even insisted on toning down her wardrobe. "In 'Flareup' I wear pretty much what I do in real life," she said. "I don't really go to the supermarket dressed in a bikini. I am sick of being just a decorative piece. Besides, you can't hide it. If you are sexy, there's no need to dramatize it."

Raquel's insistence on playing down her sexy look and concentrating on drama is not unusual. Marilyn Monroe, Lana Turner, Ursula Andress—almost every sexpot—has tried, with little success. As with Raquel, the problem not only has been the desire to do a straight part but to find a part to suit her talent.

Raquel, in spite of the $400,000 she allegedly demands per picture, has never carried a picture on her own. Till now, she had either big-name leading men—Jimmy Stewart, Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra—or gimmicks to help her along.

For example, she played a doeskin-bikini-clad girl with but two words to say, "tumak" and "akita," in "One Million Years B.C." and a nurse who journeyed through a man's bloodstream in "Fantastic Voyage."

So offering her a dramatic part was not an easy decision. Fromkess had just formed a new motion-picture company and "Flareup" was to be its initial venture.

"I first saw Raquel in a film about five or six years ago," Fromkess told me. "It was a terrible film, but I thought she had possibilities rather than just being a mannikin.

"It wasn't easy to work with Raquel. There were times during the filming when I hated her so much I decided never to make another picture with her. She can be bossy!"

Fromkess said their disagreements started with the interpretation character. Fromkess saw it one way, Raquel another. "But I'm 'the general' on all my films," he told me. "What I say goes." He agreed, however, to discard the topless idea.

After much disagreement on the ending, the "general" agreed to shoot two versions—hers and his. "In Raquel's, she rides off and leaves unresolved her relationship with her leading man. So we're using mine."

What bothered Fromkess most was Raquel's constant questioning of each scene. Why was she doing this, why that. "That consumed time, cost money, and made the budget go up," Fromkess said. "On the other hand, when she was called at 5 a.m., she was on the set, made up, ready to work. Raquel even refused a double to do some dangerous stunts.

"Whatever problems I had with her during the filming were forgotten by what I saw on the screen when the film was over," said Fromkess. "I'm ready to sign her up again as soon as I have the right script."

I tried to get the same reassurance from James Neilson, who directed the film. He refused to comment. The implication was obvious.

Raquel, however, can take consolation that her idol, Katharine Hepburn, made her share of enemies while working herself up to three Academy Awards—but then, she didn't have to fight being sexy. ◆

My Man was a King-Size Problem

(Confessions of a Big Man's Wife)

My husband is big and handsome. I always enjoy going out with him, except for one thing — his clothes never fit him correctly. They weren't cheap clothes, either. They just weren't proportioned right for a man his size. His shirts and slacks were always skimpy, his jackets never looked right and his shoes were just not in style. I tried going shopping for him myself — but I'd just run myself ragged and come home in tears.

Then one day I saw the new KING-SIZE Catalog. 96 pages of smart, stylish clothing and shoes . . . sweaters, slacks and jackets — all specially designed for TALL and BIG men! Inseams to 42"; necks to 22"; sleeves to 38". And the finest brands, McGregor, Arrow, Manhattan, Jantzen, Weldon. Shoes from 10 to 16, AAA to EEE; DuPont Corfam, Hush Puppies, Bates Floaters and many others.

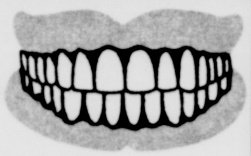

If your tall man has the same problem, write for the FREE KING-SIZE Catalog. You will solve his problem . . . and your own.

Hot Dogs with a Difference

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

Hot dogs are given a touch of sophistication in this attractive crown roast with a kraut-baked bean filling.

■ A "dog" in a bun might be everyone's favorite, but hot dogs are also at their best in these recipes.

Kraut Stuffed Frankfurter Crown

Corn sticks, quickly prepared from a mix, are a tempting hot bread accompaniment.

- 3½ to 4 cups sauerkraut
- 1 can (14 to 17 oz.) pork and beans
- 1 can (6 oz.) tomato paste
- 2 to 3 teaspoons prepared mustard
- ¼ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- ¼ teaspoon ground cumin
- 16 frankfurters
- ½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

1. In a saucepan, mix kraut, pork and beans, tomato paste, mustard, and a blend of dry ingredients. Heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally.

2. Meanwhile, prepare frankfurter crown (see how to prepare) and stand it in a 9-in. round or square pan. Fill with the hot stuffing. Brush franks completely with oil or salad dressing.

3. Set in a 350°F. oven for 20 min. Sprinkle with cheese; heat 15 min.

4. Transfer to a hot platter and garnish with parsley sprigs. Snip and remove thread before serving.

8 servings

How to Prepare the Crown: 1. Evenly line up frankfurters in a row on waxed paper in front of you. 2. Thread a needle with heavy-duty thread about 4 in. longer than the length of the frankfurter row. 3. About 1 in. from bottom ends of franks, pull thread loosely through each one, allowing about 2 in. of thread at each end. 4. Repeat procedure drawing thread through about 2 in. from top of franks. Allow a longer thread so that the "crown" will flair slightly (see photo) when filled. 5. Draw ends of bottom thread together so that franks form a ring; knot thread. Repeat with top of "crown," allowing some space between each frank so top can flair.

Potato-Hot Dog Salad

- 1 lb. frankfurters, cut in pieces
- 2½ lbs. potatoes, cooked and diced
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, diced
- 1 cup diced sweet pickles
- ½ cup finely chopped onion
- ½ cup finely chopped celery
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- ⅓ cup chopped pimiento
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ½ cup prepared mustard
- ¼ cup sweet pickle liquid
- 1 cup sugar
- 1½ teaspoons salt

Unkindest Cut

O gents, you can say
That your wives are neurotic
Or overly gay
Or are subtly despotic.

You can call them unclever,
Dishonest, or boring.
But, fellows, don't ever
Accuse them of snoring!
—Georgie Starbuck Galbraith

QUIPS AND QUOTES

In social-science class the teacher was discussing the changes in family-living patterns during the past few decades. "It used to be," she said, "that more families lived on farms, and boys and girls had definite chores to do." She added that even those who lived in towns or cities used to have to do work around the house.

"But nowadays, many boys and girls don't do anything around the house. Some don't even make their own beds." Then she asked a girl in the front, "Did you, this morning?"

"No," the girl replied, "but I remembered to turn off the electric blanket."

—Gloria Bier

The trouble with teaching a child the value of money is that the teacher is always a generation behind. —Dan Bennett

And then there was the bright child who, on seeing a post-office picture of an FBI most-wanted man, wondered aloud why the good guys didn't hang onto the criminal when they were taking his picture.

—Al Roberts

A little girl was explaining to her younger brother that it was wrong to work on Sunday.

"But what about policemen?" asked the boy. "They have to work on Sunday. Don't they go to heaven?"

"Of course not," replied his sister. "They're not needed there."

—A. T. Quigg

With rising property taxes these days, a man's house is his hassle.

—Ben Cassell

Little Tommy ran to his mother sobbing as though his heart was breaking.

"What's the matter, Tommy?" she asked.

"Daddy was hanging a picture and dropped it on his toe."

"Why, that's nothing to cry about. You should laugh at that."

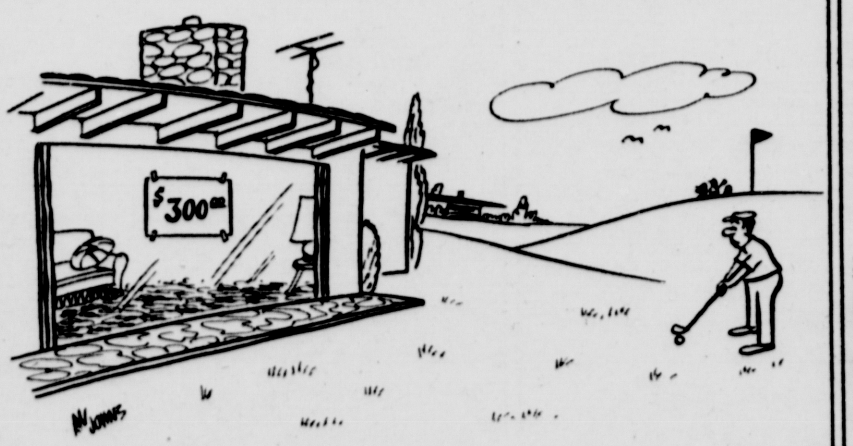

"I did," Tommy replied, still sobbing.

—Dorothea Kent

Room with a Strew

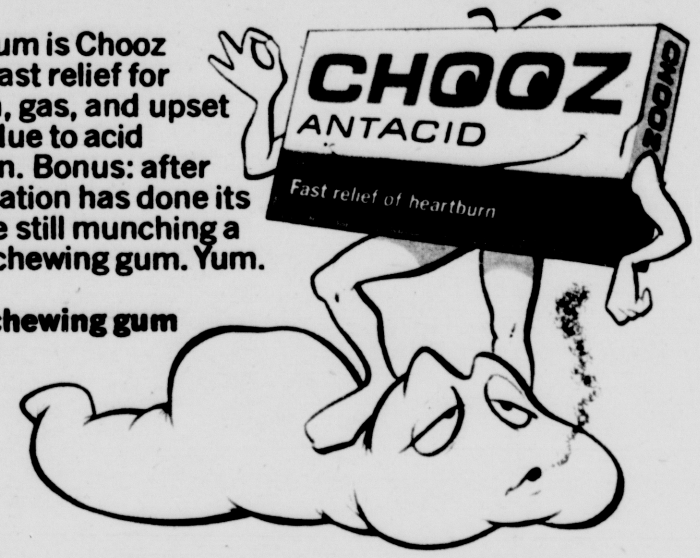

My daughter is tearful;
Her hang-ups are fearful.
I wish she'd deposit
A few in her closet.

DEAR POLLY—For years I hesitated about buying the new treated muffin pans because my old ones were still good. I finally bought the new ones which are the greatest and do not feel at all extravagant because I found a great use for my old pans. They are in my desk drawer and in my sewing notions drawer. Paper clips, erasers, rubberbands, etc., stay neatly organized in one drawer while buttons, pins, thimbles and so on are separated in the other drawer.—MRS. O.H.E.

DEAR POLLY—Our mail box is too small to hold large magazines and papers. DEAR POLLY---When the kids are playing in clay, paint or other messy things I put either my husband's or my own old shirts on them. They are long enough to cover the knees when they lean down on the floor and really keep them clean. The sleeves can be shortened easily for this.---S.V.H.
